INTRODUCTION

This English edition of the "Maathir-e-Deccan," is the outcome of the favourable reception which was accorded to the Urdu edition of this book and the encouraging remarks made by the intelligentia in general.

I am greatly indebted to M.A.N.Hydari, Esquire, (Nawab Hydar Nawaz Jung Bahadur) the Finance Member of the Hyderabad Executive Council, whose interest in the Archæology of the State is well known, for his valuable suggestion to publish this English version, so that it may make a wider appeal both in the East and the West.

I am also grateful to Nawab Inayeth Jung Bahadur, an enlightened member of the Hyderabad aristocracy, and a great grandson of the late Prime Minister, Nawab Ruknud Dowlah Bahadur, for his ardently following me in most of my adventures when I used to hunt for fresh inscriptions in the ruined cemetries of forgotten ages.

It is hoped that the shortcomings of this little work may receive gentle treatment by its readers and that its co-ordinating data may be of some value to Archæological scholars.

I have inserted a Retrospect of the origin and progress of the Qutbshahi dynasty at the end of the text and revised this edition with many useful additions and reference and some minor inaccuracies have been removed.

PREFACE

(To the Urdu edition.)

The antiquarian remains of His Exalted Highness the Nizam's Dominions are in no way less important in respect of their variety and interest than the chief monuments of the Indian Empire. Wherever you look, to whatever quarter you turn in His Exalted Highness' dominions, you will find them covered with the most varied remains of the past—remains that belong to every age from Palæolithic times down to the 20th century, remains which are representative of many peoples and of many creeds. Of prehistoric antiquities there is an abundance throughout the whole State particularly in the Southern and Eastern districts, where besides Palæolithic and Neolithic remains you have those very interesting monuments, the circular cairns and Monolithic tombs, which are generally classed as prehistoric.

Among the earliest records of the historic age, the rock inscriptions at Maski (Raichur) are unique in that they refer to the Emperor Asoka by his own name and thus once and for all place his identity beyond dispute. Then the cave temples and monasteries hewn from the living rock at Ajanta and at Ellora, afford especially valuable material for the study of Indian plastic and pictorial art, for these monuments, particularly the fresces of Ajanta, have a far reaching significance in the historic art not only of this country, but of Asia in general. A large fresco painting in Cave No. I at Ajanta is still easily recognizable as a vivid representation of the reciprocated courtesy in the presentation of their credentials by the Persian envoys from Khusru II, king of Persia, who in 625 A.D. had received a complimentary embassy from Pulakesin -(608-642 A.D.) king of the Deccan (Vatapi), the modern Badami in the Bijapur district.

This picture, in addition to its interest as a contemporary record of unusual political relations between India and Persia, is of the highest value as a landmark in the history of the art. At Ellora, the paintings which once adorned the walls of the caves, have now all but perished and only the more durable sculptures remain.

The Thousand-Pillared Temple at Warangal (Hanamkonda), the temples of Amba Jogai (Mominabad) and Tuljapur, an almost unique structural Chaitya-hall at Ter in Osmanabad district and the remains of Alampur of the early Mediæval age, are likely to prove very enlightening as links between the earliest Buddhist stupas and later temple architecture. At Ittagi, Palampet and Anwa, there are some of the most perfect and most splendid examples of Chalukyan style. The ancient remains of old Paithan (Prathisthana) and the buried temples of Patancheru, Alwampalli (Mahbubnagar district) and Karimnagar, offer a remarkably wide scope for exploration and research.

The chain of Saracenic buildings begins with the early Muslim conquerors, Qutbuddin Mubarak Khilji and Muhammad Tughlaq; the imposing monuments of the Bahmani dynasty at Gulburga, the towering Chand Minar at Daulatabad, the tomb of Ahmad Shah Wali at Bidar, the palatial Madrasa of Mahmud Gawan and the Badshahi Ashur Khana in which the lapse of so many centuries have failed to rob the freshness and resplendence of their Persian enamelled tiles. The mausoleum of Ali Barid, the finely proportioned Mecca Masjid, the Char Minar and the tombs of the Qutb Shahi Kings of Golconda may be ranked among greatest Architectural creations of the East and they by themselves tell the tale of Muslim genius in Architecture and of the bygone glory of the rulers of the Deccan.

The peculiarities of these splendid groups of antiquities have drawn towards them Western explorers and Oriental scholars as far back as 1665 or even 760 A.D. when Monsieur Thevenot, the famous French traveller or the Chinese pilgrim Hieun Thsang first visited these lands.

These memorials of the past being a great national asset, the State as well as the people have every reason to guard and to cherish them with the most zealous care. The Government of His Exalted Highness the Nizam in consequence, is taking great pains to preserve them for posterity. Apart from the educational value of these ancient monuments the beauty which pervades their line and their colour, their delicate grace and their massive strength, the beauty which enshrines their stately walls and battlements, their pillared halls and soaring minarets, and the beauty of the graven or painted forms combine in themselves the best traditions and ideals of the Indian genius and tells the history of the bygone generations.

Ever since the inaguration of the State Archæological Department in 1914 (1323 Fasli) a good number of reports and journals, illustrated by photos and drawings, have been published which deal in detail with the account of the Archæological remains of the dominions.

Mr. Henry Cousens was the first to compile a list of Antiquarian Remains of the Nizam's Dominions in 1899. This list, apart from being incomplete, was prepared in a summary manner and consequently it is difficult to form any adequate idea of the monuments which have been described in it. To wit, the monuments of the entire city and suburbs of Hyderabad have been dealt with in a single leaf of this list.

In 1922, When Mr. Ghulam Yazdani, the permanent Director of Archæology of the State, proceeded on deputation to Europe and Islamic countries for a period of 2 years, I was put in charge of this Department by the Gracious Farman of His Exalted Highness, and as in the course of discharging my interesting duties I had the privilege of going through the valuable data collected by the Department and also by having the occasion of constantly visiting and examining these ancient monuments, I felt the necessity of preparing a comprehensive descriptive list of the ancient monuments of these Dominions and first of all the remains in the premier city and its suburbs engaged my attention. The present volume may be taken as the first instalment of this undertaking, and conditions being favourable, I propose to compile lists of the antiquarian remains of the four Subahs of the Decean, in the same fashion.

The monuments mentioned in this volume are situated in the city and suburbs of Hyderabad and in listing these monuments I have followed the principles laid down by the Superintendent, Archæological Survey of India, Northern Circle.

The uninscribed monuments have been dated with reference to the reign of the contemporary emperor and in the general description of the monuments the following rules have been adhered to:—

No.—Number of monument.

a = Name of monument

b = Situation

c = Owner

d = Class

The following classification of monuments has been adopted.

- I. Those monuments which from their present condition and historical or archæological value ought to be maintained in permanent good repair.
- II. Those monuments which it is now only possible or desirable to save from further decay by such minor measures as the eradication of vegetation, the exclusion of water from the walls and the like.

III. Those monuments which from their advanced stage of decay or comparative unimportance, it is impossible or unnecessary to preserve.

The monuments in class I and II are further subdivided thus:—

I-a Monuments owned and maintained by Govern-II-a ment.

I-b) Monuments owned and maintained by private II-b) persons.

I-c) Monuments owned by private persons but main-II-c) tained by the owners and by Government jointly or by the Government exclusively.

No comment is necessary as regards monuments coming under class I, but of those in class II it will often be found necessary to carry out sufficient initial repairs over and above those specified, to put a building in such a state that those minor measures will afterwards suffice to keep it in a tolerably fair condition.

Because a building is put in class III on account of its very dilapidated condition, it does not follow that there should be any unnecessary haste in converting it into road metal. It may still be a monument of interest as long as it keeps together.

- (e) = Date.
- (f) = Inscriptions.
- (g) = General condition.
- (h)=Should be protected or protection unnecessary.
- (i)=Notes and general description.

A few of the inscriptions and their plates which have been incorporated in this book have already appeared in the Epigraphia Indo-Moslemica which is being edited by Mr. Ghulam Yazdani and published under the auspices of the Government of India. The photographs of the kings, etc., and the monuments are the property of the State Archæo-logical Department—the former having been copied from the British Museum collection are quite authentic. In describing the monuments I have as far as practicable classified them according to the year of their erection, inasmuch as the list of contents has been prepared in chronological order. I have divided the book into two parts. In the first part are set forth the monuments of the city and environs of Hyderabad; in the second part, all the monuments of Golconda have been described in one group for the convenience of the tourists.

I am greatly indebted to Sir John Marshall, the Director-General of Archæology in India, for his kind and ready permission to reproduce the blocks of Golconda and Hyderabad inscriptions in my book.

- (j)=Fourteen years previous to the foundation of the new city of Hyderabad, this bridge was constructed during the reign of Sultan Ibrahim Qutb Shah IV, chiefly with a view to afford easy egress and to avoid the risk of life which attended the nocturnal visits of Prince Muhammad Quli to Bhagmathi, a courtesan, who resided in the village of Chichlam, near Shah Ali Banda.

On one occasion when the Prince set out from the fort of Golconda to pay a visit to this sweetheart, the overflow of the Musi river did not deter him from crossing the river on horseback, and when his father, Ibrahim Qutb Shah, was informed of this venture of the Prince's, he forthwith ordered the construction of this bridge which was completed at a cost of Rs. 1,00,000.

The word 'ma' bears a double interpretation, as it also signifies water and consequently the chronogram may also mean (passage of water), although the word 'ma' has no hamza at the end.

After the famous flood of 1236 A.H. (1820 A.D.) during the reign of Nawab Sikandar Jah, Maghfirat Manzil, Asaf Jah IV, this bridge was reconstructed and in commemoration of this incident inscription (f) was set by Maharaja Chandu Lal Bahadur Shadan, the then Prime Minister. After the last flood of 1326 A. H. (1908) the superstructure of this bridge was again repaired on an extensive scale during the reign of Nawab Sir Mir Mahboob Ali Khan Bahadur Asaf Jah VI, Ghufran-Makan, and the masonry walls were replaced by railings of pierced Ashlar.

The bridge has a row of 22 arches and its dimensions are (L $600 \times$ W $36 \times$ D 42) Ft. Though one of the

(j)=According to the 'Tuzuke Qutb Shahi' during the reign of Ibrahim Qutb Shah IV, Yaqoot, a Eunuch, was staying at Lallaguda for a change. On the night of 17th Rajab he saw in a dream that a man came to him clad in green Arabic garb and asked him to accompany him to see Janabe Amir, (Hazrat Ali) who was waiting for him. Yaqoot followed him and saw Hazrat Ali scated on the summit of the hill on which his mausoleum now stands Yaqoot saluted him and remained standing for some time without any discourse from either side. The following morning he went up the hill and saw the hand and side mark of Hazrat Ali engraved on the same stone where he was seen seated during the night. Yaqoot caused the marks to be hewn out of the stone and had a masonry arch built there and made offerings on 17th Rajab in the name of Hazrat When this incident was related to the king, he also visited the hill to pay his respects. The mosque which is situated to the south was erected by Sultan Ibrahim Qutb Shah. This Urs (ceremony) is still observed annually on 17th Rajab. Later on, Phiki Bi, daughter of Syed Muzaffar, Minister of Tana Shah, who used saltless food became mujawir of this shrine, and is buried in the Northern enclosure. Then Nawab Ruknuddowlah Bahadur, Prime Minister of Ghufran Maab, Asaf Jah II, who succumbed to the wounds inflicted on him by one Faizoo Gardee in 1189 A. H., is buried in his garden close to the steps of the hill. Vikarud-Dowlah, Nazim of Hyderabad is also buried in his garden close by. Samsamud-Dowlah originally built a wooden canopy opposite the mosque of Ibrahim Qutb Shah and also a wooden hall near the shrine, but this wooden canopy and hall were afterwards replaced by masonry by Nawab Samsamud-Dowlah Bahadur and Mah Laga Bai, respectively. Nawab Asaf Jah II, had the outer door and other out-houses built and conferred the Jagir of Charlapalli for the mujawirs and sweepers, crier-to-prayers, drum beaters and gongstrikers and for other expenses of the shrine. A Nagarkhana

(the place where drums are beaten at stated intervals) was built by Maharaja Chandu Lal Bahadur, and a Baradari by Raja Rao Rambha Jiwant Bahadur. Near Kamargah a huge arch was built by Jamal Saheb, Azmat Jung manager of Zafarud-Dowlah Bahadur, Mubarizul Mulk. On the route through which the Sandal is carried up a big arch, a mausoleum, an Ashurkhana and a repository for drinking water were built by the musician Khush-hal Khan' who was the instructor of Mah Laga Bai. On the outskirts of the hill Mah Laga Bai had a mosque and Karwansarai built and in the centre of a beautiful garden is situated the last resting place of Mah Laqa and her mother. The new Shahabad stone steps leading to the hill were constructed by the order of His Exalted Highness the Nizam, soon after his accession to the throne. The decoration of the shrine with glass-work was done by the late Nawab Imdad Jung Bahadur, but it has been completed by Nawab Shah Yar Jung Bahadur.

There is another hillock opposite the Maula Ali hill, which is called 'Qadam Rasul,' on which sacred relies of the Prophet were deposited by Muhammad Shukrullah Khan, a servant of Nawab Ghufran Maab, Asaf Jah II. He also had a portion of the revenue of Trimulgherry village assigned for the expenses of this place; a mosque was also built here by the same gentleman. The steps leading to this hill were constructed by Kazim Ali Khan. On the southern extremity of this hill there is a baradari, (citadel), which is ascribed to Syed Muzaffar, Minister of Sultan Abdullah Qutbshah VII, and Tana Shah. The adjoining hill has several huge boulders piled one over the other; locally this is called Bhandoli² hill, and traditionally it is said to be a fort belonging to some old Railu Rajah³; remains of a stone gate and wall may still be seen here, it is also called the fort of Arjuna.

The Sandal of Moula Ali is annually carried on the back of a camel with great pomp from the grave yard of Rang Ali Shah; after this follows another Sandal for the safety of His Exalted Highness from the "Punja Shah," and is carried to the Maula Ali hill. This hill is 2017 feet above the level of the sea.

- (j)=Bhagnagar or the present city of Hyderabad was founded by Sultan Muhammad Quli Qutb Shah V, in 999 A.H. (1590 A.D.). Sultan Muhammad Quli's sweetheart Bhagmati, resided in the Chichlam village which is now called Shah Ali Banda and the City of Bhagnagar was styled after her name, but after her demise it was denominated Hyderabad and seven years after the completion of the city, 'Farkhunda Bunyad 1006 A.H. (1597 A.D.) became its chronogrammatic epithet. This name was changed to 'Darul-Jihad, Hyderabad' after the sack of the city by the Emperor Aurangzeb in 1098 A.H., and Farkhunda Bunyad was again adopted by the omission of the word 'Darul Jihad' by Shah Alam. When the foundation of the city was being laid, Sultan Muhammad Quli gave precedence to the building of Char Minar which is a prototype of Taziya²

⁽²⁾ Owing to the outbreak of cholera the inhabitants fixed a huge Tazia in the heart of the city on Thursday, 1st Moharrum 999 A.H., so that it may serve as a charm to safegaurd them from the epidemic, and when it subsided, the huge building of Char Minar was constructed of stone and mortar at the same place. ("Tuzuke Qutbshahi.") (MSS).

This square edifice is situated in the heart of the city and is built of plaster and stone; its four corners lie exactly toward the four cardinal points, each side measuring 60 ft. in length and 42 ft. in width. Its main building consists of four splendid arches—one in each direction, measuring 24 by 30 ft. containing a small eistern in the centre. Facing each arch are four highways; several stairs lead to the upper story and the top portion is double storyed, composed of finely proportioned arches; the four corners of the upper portion have four minarets (80 ft. high), each of which is again subdivided into four storeys. The entire building is composed of lime and stone and is full of fine stucco decorations, the height of each minar from the ground level is 160 ft.

The opinion of Monsieur Thevenot, the French traveller, that "there is no edifice like the Char Minar in the whole city which appears so splendid to the eye" is quite true to the present day. In the Qutb Shahi period the first storey was used as a Madrasa1 and cubicle for the students. on the second storey there was a mosque and water reservoir where water used to come from the Jalpalli tank and from this top reservoir water was distributed to the inhabitants of the city and the Royal palace. A fine birdseye view of the picturesque city may be had from the top, but owing to the proximity of the Royal palaces of Chau-Mahalla and Panch-Mahalla, the public are usually not allowed to go upstairs, but on emergent occasions it is possible to obtain a special permit from the Sarf-i-Khas. It has been estimated that this glorious edifice was completed at a cost of 200,000 Huns² or 9 Lacs of rupces. After the extinction of the Qutb Shahi dynasty, during the Subadarship of Bahadur Dil Khan the South western minaret of Char Minar fell to pieces by the effect of lightning, but it was forthwith repaired at a cost

(2) Hun, a gold coin, was equivalent of 4½ Moghal rupees,

⁽¹⁾ The origin of the word Madrasah is given in the Tarikhe Zufra that this name was given to Char Minar because all necessaries of life were also procurable here.

Nasirud Dowlah Bahadur, Ghufran-Manzil, Asaf Jah III, plastering of the entire Char Minar was done in 1258 A.H. (1824 A.D.) at a cost of a lac of rupees. A guard of Afghan City Police was stationed here in 1302 A.H. (1884 A.D.). In 1304 A.H., (1886 A.D.) on the occasion of the visit of Lord Dufferin, Viceroy of India, to Hyderabad, iron railings were fixed round Char Minar with a gate on the Northern side. In 1307 A.H. (1889 A.D.) four clocks were set on the second storey of this building. On special occasions this building is illuminated by electric bulbs from top to bottom including a resplendent star and a crescent. The accompanying photograph depicts the northern side of Char Minar.

- (j)=After the completion of Char Minar a piazza of four sublime arches was built by Sultan Muhammad Quli Qutb Shah V, being formerly called, that on the West, "Daulat Khanae Ali, (The gate of Royal residence), that on the East, the Naqqar Khana," (gate of palace where drums are beaten), and generally the central area of the four arches was termed the "Jilau Khana" (Royal Vestibule).

At present these lofty arches which are used as passages through which a huge elephant with a canopied litter can easily pass, are called, (Northern) "Machli Kaman"—the fish Arch (a big fish made of bamboo and paper resembling a miniature æroplane is suspended in the centre of the arch on every lunar new year), (Southern) the Char Minar arch, (Eastern) The Kali Kaman or Kaman of Shambhoo Pershad, (the Black arch). (Western), Kaman Sher Dil or Sihr Batil, (the arch of lion hearted or Magic breaker). The Hyderabad Improvement Trust Board is now building excellent arches on either side of the road from Char Minar to Afzulganj by His Exalted Highness' command.

Formerly the Qutb Shahi palaces were situated towards the western arch, but the relentless hand of time has totally obliterated them. This portion of the land remained the residence of Qutb Shahi Kings and the Royal family, ever since the capital was shifted here from Golconda by Sultan Muhammad Quli V, till the last siege of Golconda in 1098 On the eastern side was the entrance to the Royal palace which was approached after crossing a courtyard, 1,000 ft. square; the gate of the Royal residence was a huge structure of sandalwood in which golden spikes were set. The adjoining outhouses were used as a sitting place for the nobles and officials. These noblemen used to come every morning with their retinue and attendants and after reaching the Royal vestibule which was in the centre of the four arches, the suite and retinue were left behind and they used to proceed unattended for the audience of the King. On either side of the Royal gate a few elephants remained standing day and night and inside the gate 1,000 foot, 200 African slaves and 1,000 horse used to be drawn up in rank and file. The four cornered octangular reservoir was intended for quenching the thirst of the army. the southern enclosure was the Privy Council Chamber, in the Northern enclosure was the Royal wardrobe house and other Royal offices; the Northern enclosure consisted of four apartments where soldiers, stewards, clerks on night duty and armour bearers used to sit. In Chandan Mahal ordinary armour bearers attended alternately; in Gagan Mahal, Turks, Arabs and Deccani armour bearers used to assemble and the main apartment was reserved for trustworthy servants. Sajan Mahal was set apart for learned and virtuous men and the eastern enclosure was the public dining hall where thousands of deserving men were supplied with delicious food from the Royal kitchen every morning and evening*.

Four highways lead to different parts of the City through every arch and exactly in the centre of the four arches there is a reservoir, a view of which may be had from every direction, hence its name Char-su-ka-Hauz, (the four cornered reservoir). It is now called Gulzar Hauz; the old terrace with which it was surrounded was pulled down in 1313 A.H., (1895 A.D.) for the sake of widening the path, and an iron fencing was fixed in its stead. The Qutb Shahi Kings used to sit on the balcony of the Royal residence facing this reservoir.

- (i)=The inner hall is the oldest portion of this building. It was built by Sultan Muhammad Quli Qutb Shah V, at a cost of Rs. 66,000. It will be apparent from the above inscriptions that the construction of this building remained eurrent from 1001 A.H. (1592 A.D.) to 1005 A.H. (1596-A.D.). The name of the reigning sovereign is inscribed on the western wall and also on the central niche, but the word Quli has been omitted in the latter inscription. The Persian enamel work was executed in the last year of the reign of Sultan Muhammad Quli in 1020 A. H. (1611 A.D.). Besides this the name and royal titles of Sultan Abdullah Qutb Shah VII, the grandson of Muhammad Quli, have also been inscribed in fine ornamental style which indicates that he took a considerable part in the renovation of this building. He also introduced the use of standards in this Ashur-Khana during the month of Moharram.

The addition of outer halls, which stand on a range of huge wooden colonnades was made during the reign of His Highness Nawab Mir Nizam Ali Khan Bahadur, Asaf Jah II as will be apparent from inscription No. 5. Inscription No. (7) was fixed by Nawazish Ali Khan Shaida, a Mutawalli of this Ashur Khana, when the main gate was built by him during the reign of Asaf Jah II. In 1250 A.H. (1834 A.D.) Asad, the Superintendent of buildings, restored the decorations of the halls. In respect of age this Ashurkhana is older than Imam Baras of Hugli or Lucknow and its enamel work compares favourably with the best buildings of Lahore and Multan. Notwithstanding the lapse of 3 centuries the freshness and resplendence of enamel tiles have maintained their brilliant lustre, and the excellence and beauty of their colours as also the arrangement and fitting together of joints are highly commendable. The wooden wainscotting of the roof is the characteristic of the old Asafiya style of Architecture. His Highness Asaf Jah II, conferred a Jagir yielding an annual revenue of Rs. 12,000 for the expenses of this Ashur Khana, and His Highness Nawab Sikandar Jah Bahadur, Asaf Jah III., made an addition of Rs. 2,000 cash to the existing annuity. The accompanying photograph of the central niche indicates the enamel work and caligraphical skill of the artist. The extensive courtyard of this building is now used as a public auction house.

There was also a Karwan Serai and a bath attached to it; but at present these are in a neglected and ruinous condition and require much restoration.

The Northern enclosure of this building contains a large standard (Alam) of steel which is always kept standing in a small room. The Mutawalli showed the author copies of 2 Royal deeds, which bear out that during the Qutb Shahi period one Agha Mohsin of Persia had brought with requisite authenticity a piece of fetters of the 4th Imam Zainul Abideen from Damascus (Syria), which was fixed in this standard and several miracles became manifest from this during the Qutb Shahi and Alamgiri periods, with the result that during the Qutb Shahi period one Hun per diem and 2 Huns in the reign of Aurangzeb, were allotted to it for flower and incense expenses. Both of the deeds bear no date, but on the top of the deeds are inscribed the words (Ended with peace and prosperity) ختم بالخير والسعادة which serve to indicate that they pertain to the reign of Sultan Adullah Qutb Shah VII, as after the seige of Golconda in 1066 A.H. (1655 A.D.) a peace was concluded on the distinet stipulation that the daughter of Sultan Abdullah should be given in marriage to Prince Muhammad, son of Emperor Aurangzeb and owing to Sultan Abdullah having no male issue, Prince Muhammad was acknowledged as heir-apparent to the throne of Golconda. Ever since the question of succession was thus settled Sultan Abdullah had the words engraved on his coins and also the Royal (ختم بالخدروا لسعادة) seals of Sultan Abdullah and Tana Shah possessed the same expressions, as the extermination of their house was contemplated by this perforced agreement.

In one of the out-houses of Darushshifa, four banners of the time of His Highness the Asaf Jah II. are kept under a guard of irregular forces.

There is also a Darush-shifa Mosque close by, where prayers are observed to the present day, built by Muhammad Quli V, and its style bears affinity to other Qutb Shahi mosques.

given in the inscription No. (1) and the name of the caligrapher is Baba Khan.

The character and style of the inscription carved in the prayer niche of the Great Mosque in Golconda Tombs, (No. 67) which will be dealt with in chapter II, is, to a great extent identical with those of inscription No. 2 of this mosque, although in the former the Quranic verse has been written up to (الروف رحيم) only, and the latter portion of inscription No. 2 i.e., (سلام علي المرسلين والحمد لله رب العالمين) has not been reproduced there. Evidently the caligrapher at Golconda has incessantly laboured to copy (71 years later in 1077 A. H.) this original specimen belonging to 1006 A.H. (1666 A.D.); although one of these caligraphers is an Arab and the other a Persian, and the characters of the Golconda mosque inscription are bolder and exhibit much force of form representing the finest example of Naskh script.

During the reign of His Highness Asaf Jah III, this mosque was extensively repaired and the wooden railings were fixed by Mir Abbas Ali Khan, Etisamul-Mulk Bahadur Mir Munshi, who died in 1230 A.H. (1814 A.D.).

Hafiz, Qari Mir Shujauddin, Khalifa of Shah Rafiuddin stayed in this mosque when he first came from Burhanpur, and engaged himself in imparting Arabic education to his numerous pupils of this place. The custom of committing to memory, the Quran and the recitation of Maulood of the Prophet became prevalent in the City through his exertions and influence.

Another mosque of the same age is situated near Karwan and is called Jali-Ki-Masjid, because close to the mosque stands the graveyard of Habibullah Shah in a trellised enclosure. It is a small mosque having 3 arched opening and on either margins of the prayer niche is engraved the following on black basalt. (New).

- "For the chronogram of its erection said, the abode of God became manifest."

By the side of the mosque an empty dome is situated, its inner roof stands on graceful props of Averroha Carambola.

It is a very small building and must have been used by the Royal camp followers while the Qutbshahi Kings used to pass this village on their way to Hayatnagar¹. The prayer-niche which is of highly polished black basalt bears the above inscription, in best Thulth of Tauqi' style, and resembles the inscription of Shukrullah guda mosque (No. 10), and it appears that the inscription mentioned in No. 10, was also written by the same caligrapher (Husain). The outer appearance of the mosque is so insignificant that no one could fancy that specimen of such a masterly piece of writing could be discovered here. The author is indebted to Nawab Dr. Sir Amin Jung Bahadur for this discovery.

According to the local tradition this loose inscription, which is not in-situ, was originally fixed over the outer archway the mosque but owing to the dismantling of the arch, this inscription which is broken, with several parts missing, was reposited on the roof of the mosque, it measures, $(9 \times 6 \text{ ft.})$ and is in the form of an arch. It may further obliteration and saved from decay by storing it below the roof of the mosque. The year of its erection (1019 A. H.) indicates that this mosque was built a year previous to the demise of Sultan Muhammad Quli V, and 13 years after the erection of Jame' Masjid (No. 7). Although at present this mosque has no special features, yet the excellence of the inscription serves to indicate that it must have been built under royal patronage. It is also probable that this spot may have been used as a Royal camp on the occasion of the visits of Golconda Kings to Maula Ali. Evidently no trace of any old habitation is visible here and as such, this mosque cannot be attributed, as an adjunct even of any tomb or graveyard as none exists close by. mosque proper is in a poor state of preservation and contains fine mihrab recesses, and the steps which give access to it are fast disappearing.

On the top of the hill there was a small garden and other buildings, out of which only a square room in the form of a huge stool, commonly called the stool of Satan exists now. believed that in the Qutb Shahi and later periods the announcement of Moghal Farmans from Delhi, was made from the top of this rock by beat of drums, hence the name of Naubut Panar was given to it. During the last siege of Golconda the first camp of Emperor Aurangzeb was pitched in the extensive field below this rock and consequently after the conquest of Golconda this field was named Fateh Maidan (The Plain of Victory). Owing to its commanding view and historic associations the quarrying of stones from this rock has now been prohibited.

In 1270 A.H. (1853 A.D.) this maidan was first used for a military parade and in 1280 A.H. (1863 A.D.) and 1301 A.H. (1883 A.D.) respectively Major Rock and Col. Neville and 8 thousand masons and labourers. The work of its construction continued during the reigns of Abdullah Qutb Shah VII and Tana Shah VIII, at a cost of 8 lacs of rupees, and it was completed after 77 years by the Emperor Aurangzeb in 1104 A.H.¹. When the Emperor was requested for further decoration of the mosque he read this famous couplet.

(Transactions of the world have never been completed by any one, (consequently) impose upon yourself as little as possible).

When the foundation of this mosque was being laid, it is related by all the contemporary historians that Sultan Muhammad VI, after inviting the learned and pious men of the City asked them to have the foundation stone laid by one who had never missed his prayers; but none from the assemblage having come forward, he himself laid the foundation stone by saying that he had never missed even his 'Tahaj-Jud' (a prayer repeated after midnight) ever since his 12th year This is one of the most sublime and impressive mosques of the Decean, and it is so extensive that nearly 10,000 men can easily say their prayers conjointly. The building is 225 ft. long, 180 ft. wide and 75 ft. high: the outer enclosure is oblong whose terrace is 360 ft. each way. At a corner of the platform there is a cistern for ablution, with 2 long slabs measuring 8 ft. each, and it is said that these slabs belonged to a temple in Maisrum village, no traces of which are now left. The mosque is composed of triple vestibules measuring (195×126' 8") with arches in each row, and five masonic arches in front, the Northern and Southern extremities are surmounted by two large domes. The two lofty minarets in front, of the main Tavernier the stone for this niche was hewn out of the quarry by several hundred labourers in the course of five years and 700 pairs of bullocks carried it to the mosque. One of the rooms of the courtyard contains the hair of the Prophet and other sacred relies. Sultan Muhammad Qutbshah VI, named this mosque (المحافظة المحافظة المحافظ

The following verse was composed by a poet and presented to the King in commemoration of its erection.

"If the pilgrimage (going round) of noble Kaaba is not attainable to thee, come and pray in the Kaaba of the Deccan." As regards the adoption of the name of 'Mecca Masjid' it is said that Muhammad VI, had some bricks made from the earth of Mecca which were fixed over the central arch. The compiler of 'Tawarikhe Farkhunda,' has given another version, that it being the peculiarity of Kaaba that it is at no time devoid of pilgrims, so is the case with Mecca Masjid that it has never been found without those, who come to say their prayers and for this reason the name of 'Mecca Masjid' was spontaneously adopted by the public and became renowned all the world over. During the Qutbshahi period 36 maunds of food was cooked and distributed to the poor every day, but during the reign of Khuld Makan (Aurangzeb) it was reduced to Rs. 12 per diem'.

 - (j)=In Mughalpura lane, near the house of the Ex. Kotwal (the late Inayet Husain Khan Bahadur), in a vaulted narrow street two graves are situated side by side on two elevated terraces surmounted by two domes. The first one belongs to Kutbuddin alias Nimatullah and the second contains the remains of his son-in-law Mirza Sharief. The clevation of the terrace is about 5 ft. and sarcophagii of both are of polished black basalt and the script is carved in best Thulth character and Tauqia style.

These personages were members of the Qutbshahi family, inasmuch as that when Prince Abdullah Mirza was born of Muhammad Qutbshah VI and he was warned by the astrologers not to see the face of the Prince until he attained the age of 12; the King entrusted the fostering and the tutorship of the Prince to his paternal uncle Mir Qutbuddin, Nimatullah, who was also made Mir Jumla¹. According to 'Gulzare Asafiyah' Qutbuddin died five years after he was made a tutor to the Prince, and as Prince Abdullah was born in 1023 A.H. (1614 A.D.) it follows that the date of Qutbuddin's death ought to have been 1028 A.H.(1618 A.D.). Several inscriptions having 3 conflicting dates are to be found on the headstone and sarcophagus of his grave but in the author's opinion the date (1024 A.H.) mentioned in the inscription Nos. 3, (b and c) of the sarcophagus is the year of his death. If any other date is taken to be the year of his death it will be highly improbable to have the sarcophagus of one's grave inscribed prior to his death. Thus it shows that he did not survive long after the birth of the Prince.

Prior to the erection of the defences and other buildings of the fort, a mosque was built by him in the centre of the fort, which is still extant, then the 'Idgah' the ramparts and other royal paaces were commenced. double defences and around the outer wall the work of digging a very deep trench (150 ft. wide) was started and after laying a base of mortar and stone (75 ft. wide) it was resolved to make a 24 ft. wide intrenchment when the foundation reached the surface of the earth In the meantime when the work was in progress the King (Muhammad VI) died of typhoid fever and the fort which by then had cost 3 lacs Huns (14 lacs of rupees), remained incomplete. His son Sultan Abdulla VII, considering it to be inauspicious ordered the work to be abandoned. It would appear on referring to inscription (4) of No. 29 that this Sultan-Nagar was acknowledged to be the capital of the Qutbshahi kingdom in 1035 A.H. At present the outer wall and buildings are in a very dilapidated condition and are called Old Fort. According to Tarikhe Farkhunda' the stones of the defences of this fort were utilized by Nawab Mushirul Mulk Bahadur for the construction of Sarurnagar village in 1214 A.H. (1799 A.D.) It is unnecessary to demolish these ruined walls as long as they keep together.

He was held in great estimation on account of his learning, piety and poetry. After his duties for sometime discharging disengaged himself from the affairs of the state and spent a retired life from the latter part of Muhammad Quli V's reign, till the time of Abdulla Qutb Shah VII. Years previous to the foundation of the City of Hyderabad, Shah Charagh, a holyman from Najaf (Mespot) had taken his abode at the place where he is buried now in the necropolis; formerly this place was a portion of Chichlam, (Shah Ali Banda), which was populated solely by Brahmans, Shah Charagh being the first Muslim to inhabit this place, and according to his last wishes his remains were also interred here. Later on, after the building of the City. Nurul-Huda, a pious man, took his abode near of the late Shah Charagh tomb the died ultimately and was buried and Several years afterwards Mir Momin there. of Astarabad purchased this land and bequeathed it for free burial of the dead, he also mixed the holy earth of Karbala in this land. A bath and a well was built by him and a place in the city called 'Mir Chauck' is attributed to this gentleman. The grave of Shah Charagh and Mir Momin are situated in roofless enclosures and are of polished black basalt. Momin died in 1035 A.H. (1625 A.D.) and near the steps of his mausoleum is buried Mirza Ahmad (Muhammad) Nimat Khane Ali the famous satirist and poet and Superintendent of the kitchen of the Emperor Aurangzeb: an oblong polished slab of black basalt marks the grave of this great poet and is situated exactly below the first step of the mausoleum of Mir Momin. Opposite the paved court yard there is a well, and the platform contains nine un-known graves, none of which bears any inscription. In the royal palaces of this village, the ceremony of the first shave of Sultan Abdullah Qutb Shah was celebrated by his mother on a very grand scale, successively for twelve days in 1041 A.H. (1631 A.D.) and the expenses of these celebrations are said to have amounted to 2 lacs of Huns¹. Outside these buildings a grand mosque, on a terrace measuring about 150 feet each way, is situated inside a very extensive Karwansarai. mosque proper is composed of 5 double arches of massive masonry and is flanked by two lofty minarets. The prayer-niche is made of plaster and bears no inscription. During the reign of His Highness Asaf Jah VI, this mosque was thoroughly repaired, but at present its roof appears to be badly in need of repairs; it should be made watertight and the rank vegetation which is to be seen on the outer surface of the mosque should also be eradicated. The mosque is floored by the local ashler stones and the facade is decorated in stucco. The centre of the terrace contains a small cistern for ablution. The extensive court yard is about (450×400) of an oblong shape and it is surrounded on all sides by several hundred double rooms of massive masonry which were intended for the use of travellers: hence it is called the "Sarai of Man Saheba." The Sarai and the mosque are entirely uninhabited now-a-days and are situated at a little distance from the existing village. There are 3 lofty entrance gates of the Sarai, on the Northern, Eastern and Southern directions, but only the Eastern gate is now in use; the other two being blocked. At the North eastern extremity of the courtyard there is a big well called 'HatiBauli' (Elephant-well), the water of which was formerly drawn by elephants.

The 'Khas Bagh,' outside the Sarai is still in a blooming condition and is even now watered by the old 'Hati Bauli.' Outside the Sarai and Khas Bagah there is a subterranean building called 'Tal-Makan,' whose entrance is now blocked by huge pieces of masonry. The upper storey of this 'Tal-Makan,' appears. to have been demolished, and only a mound—the debris of the whole building—and the vaulted subterranean building now remain.

This mosque being a very fine specimen of Qutbshahi architecture should be specially preserved by the State Archæological Department.

It is mentioned in the sanad that this mosque was built by Khairiatun-Nisa Begum, alias Man Saheba, daughter of Sultan Muhammad Qutb Shah, for her tutor Akhund Mulla Abdul Malik. The Akhund had however presented a Quran written by Yaqoot and a Shah Nama, to the King, through the Begum, in return for which the King awarded him 700 Huns and a Khilat (robe of honour) of chehl Nag (40 jewels), but the Akhund declining the award requested that some landed property may be granted to him; consequently 45 Bighas of Inam land was granted to him. The present Mutawalli claims his descent from the late Akhund and is in charge of the mosque and the lands. He holds several other interesting documents which corroborate the facts, an abstract of which has been given above. A reference is also found in the Sanad to the empty domed building which stands close to the mosque. The reason of its being devoid of any grave is thus mentioned in the sanad: -The dome was constructed in the Inam land. north of the mosque by Akhund for selfburial, but owing to his demise in the holy cities (Mecca and Madina) the dome remained vacant.

 - (j)=Inside Gowlipura gate in the necropolis of Rifai'e there are two domes. The larger one which is situated on an elevated platform covers the graves of Khairat Khan and his son. The grave of the boy is in the centre of the dome and that of Khairat Khan on its side. The adjoining dome is said to cover that of his wife, but there is no inscription on her grave.

According to Hadiqatus-Salatin, Khairat Khan Sar Naubat, was deputed by Sultan Abdullah Qutb Shah VII, as an ambassador to the court of Shah Abbas Safavi, and was sent from Hyderabad with valuable presents in company with Muhammad Quli Beg son of Qasim Beg, the Persian Ambassador. The Emperor Shah Jahan sent for him from Surat which was the chief port of embarkation at that period and he also gave Khairat Khan a letter to the Shah of Persia. When Khairat Khan reached Bandare-(Port) Abbas, the news of the death of Shah Abbas on 2nd Jamadil-Awal 1037 A.H. (1627 A.D.) and the accession of the Shah Safi were announced. From Port Abbas, Khairat Khan went to Asphahan, which was the capital of Persia at the time, and presented the letters of Shah Jahan and Sultan Abdullah The new Shah after treating him for several years as a State guest allowed him to return home in 1043 A.H. (1633 A.D.) Khairat Khan returning via Qandhar gave the reply of Shah Jahan's letter to him and repaired to Hyderabad on 17th Zil Qadah 1044 A.H. (1634 A.D.) Here he was received with high favour and was promoted to the rank of Minister. In 1047 A.H. (1637 A.D.) when the grandmother of Sultan Abdullah Qutb Shah was proceeding on a pilgrimage to Mecca, Khairat Khan accompanied her as far as Masulipatam. Later in 1050 A.H. (1640 A.D.) several shops and a garden were built by Khairat Khan close to the Northern steps of Musa Burj (No. 62) in the Golconda Fort, and a granary (No. 63) was also constructed under his supervision in 1052 A.H. (1642 A.D.). headstone of the grave shows that the death of Khairat Khan occured on 18th Ramzan 1066 A.H. (1655 A.D.) and his minor son Abdullah died five months earlier, on 5th Rabius-Sani 1066 A.H. (1655 A.D.); that is why the grave of his son occupies the central portion of the dome. The accompanying plate was copied from the water colour painting of Khairat Khan in the collection of the British Museum Mss.

(j)=The main porch was built by the clerk of Maharajah Chandu Lal Bahadur, a disciple of the family of the Saint, who buried in this dome and the inscription was also fixed by him. This dome consists of several graves of the sons and grandsons, of the chief saint Saivid Miran Khuda Numa Husaini alias Miranji Saheb who is buried in the The style of architecture of the dome resembles the fruit of Averrhoa carambola and is very graceful. Besides the main porch where the drums are beaten at stated intervals. there is also a Sama' Khana, (a place where a congregation assembles every year on the anniversary-day of the Saint to hear the songs which are recited by master-musicians of both sexes), and a repository for drinking water, but the latter buildings are in a decayed condition. The Miranji Saheb Khudanuma, was formerly employed in the service of Sultan Abdullah Qutb Shah VII, and when he went to Bijapur to carry out some royal mandate, he fell in with Aminuddin A'la there who perfected him in the order of Sufism and after returning to Hyderabad he gave up service and engaged himself in spiritual pursuits. According to 'Gulzari Asafiyah' his death occured on 18th Jamadil-Awal 1070 A.H. (1659 A.D.), during the latter portion of Sultan Abdullah's reign. The same book relates this incident of his life that once Emperor Aurangzeb asked him (by way of criticism) whether he was Khuda Numa (one who leads to God), on which he replied that 'if I do not remain Khuda numa, I shall become Khud Numa,' (vainglorious). The deceased was the author of two books¹ on spiritualism in the old Urdu language of the Decean². The present dome was constructed by his son and successor Shah Aminuddin II, who died in 1074 A.H. (1663 A.D.) and lies buried under the same roof.

About a furlong from this dome there is a double storeyed dome of Handan Khan, Mandan Khan (Hannan and Mannan Khan). The upper storey is paved with plaster and has no sarcophagus, but in the vaulted lower storey which is comparatively more secure, the central grave is of polished black stone and the other one is of ordinary ashlar stone. In the N. E. direction from the black grave there is another small grave, but none of these bears any inscription. According to the local tradition they were intimate friends of Sultan Abul Hasan Tana Shah, but comtemporary history throws no light on the identity of these brothers,

The tomb is covered by a canopy supported by 8 pillars of ashlar masonry. One of these pillars was struck by a cannon ball of the fort in the famous siege of 1098 A.H., with the result that the central portion of the top pillar was fractured, which still stands in the same condition, and locally it is attributed to the miracle of the Saint.

His son Sycd Shah Aminuddin Ali Husaini who died in 1150 Λ .H. is also buried by the side of his father, but his grave is made of concrete.

(1676 A.D.) and whose tomb of polished black basalt is situated on the right side of the road, about $1\frac{1}{2}$ furlong after the turn of the road to Sangam (Goleonda).

Close to the latter dome there is a three arched mosque which was most probably erected along with this tomb, apparently with the object of securing an abode for the deceased in Paradise. The arched openings have been closed by the Ecclesiastical Department of the State in order to save the mosque from desceration as it is situated in an isolated place.

The superiority and wisdom of the country, which had hitherto waned became renewed and the whole people passed their lives in peace and tranquility. The following hemistich of chronogram came by intuition. 'Muhammad got ascendancy from God'."

In 1045 A.H. when his good offices averted the invasion of Shah Jahan he was given the honour of coming as far as Dad Mahal and Hydar Mahal, scated in his palanquin. This being his distinctive honour, not enjoyed by previous ministers.

Every morning learned men and priests used to assemble in his school for debates and discussed controversial topics and on every Tuesday poets used to excel in old and fresh poetry. His exact year of death is not given in any contemporary history but the author of Dabistane Mazaheb writes that he died in Mocha in 1050 A H. while on his way to Mecca. Being of distinguished personality most probably his remains were brought to Hyderabad for interment by the side of his wife who had predeceased him. He was the compiler of Sharhe-Irshad, Arbaeen and foot-notes of Jame'-Abbasi. The last portion of Jame'-Abbasi was also completed by him.

The loose inscription slab which is lying in the courtyard of Toli Masjid, indicates that a mosque was creeted in 1043 A.H. (1633 A.D.) by the endeavours of 'Shaikhe-Peshwa,' the Shaikhe Peshwa mentioned in this inscription is Shaikh Ibne-Khatoon who was the Peshwa of Sultan Abdullah Qutbshah.

which gives one some idea of what the grandeur of this lofty palace must have been.

In 1097 A.H. (1685 A.D.) on the occasion of the last siege of Golconda, Prince Shah Alam had encamped here. This palace was used as a resort for the Royal ladies; hence the name of Gosha (Shelter from observation) was appropriately given to this building. It is said that a subterranean passage formerly existed from here to Golconda which is now According to the Tarikhe-Zufra (MSS) "the blocked up. name of "Goshamahal" was given to this palace because it was situated in the village of Gosha and Tana Shah had built a lofty palace 15,000 feet square and 75 feet high. In front of an extensive terrace there was a very large reservoir (1,365 ft.L. 1,230 ft. W. and 12 ft. Through the spiritual provisions of Shah Raju II, he became son-in-law of the King and ascended the throne of Qutbshah.

His father Syed Shah Raju I, a brother of Husain Shah Wali, was the recipient of a Jagir and monthly allowance from Sultan Muhammad Quli, but during the intrigue of Muhammad Khuda Banda for the deposition of his brother Muhammad Quli, Shah Raju I, sided Khuda Banda and the famous secret council was held in his house. The King becoming aware of this plot ordered the imprisonment of all the conspirators, Shah Raju I, in the meantime fled to Bijapur and ended his days there.

His son Shah Raju II, died here in 1096 A.H. (1684 A.D.) during the reign of Abul Hasan Tana Shah, who built a very splendid dome on his grave with extensive Dalans and colonnades of ashlar masonry. It may be safely asserted that none of the domes of the Dominions can compare with this magnificent three storeyed building of finely proportioned arches. Other members of the family of Shah Raju II, are also buried here on either side of the central grave. The western wing of the building was under construction when the Qutbshahi dynasty was overthrown and consequently this portion and the inner plastering is still incomplete. The golden spire above the dome was fixed by Tahniatunnisa Begam (mother of Asaf Jah III) during the reign of Asaf Jah II. The canopy and wooden litters were completed by Asaf Jah IV. The enclosed plate of his photograph is a copy of his painting now in the British Museum collection.

A few furlongs ahead of this building another smaller dome of Syed Shah Shamsuddin, Ali Akbar is situated in an old cemetery. He is said to have been an uncle and spiritual head of Shah Raju II; the present dome was built during the reign of Abul Hasan Tanashah in 1085 A.H. It is profusely decorated with inscriptions and represents fine specimens of excellent Nastaliq and Thulth calligraphy of bold type. The massive entrance doors of the mausoleum are of highly polished black basalt.

The Nastaliq inscriptions are carved on wooden panels fixed on all four sides of the building. (New)

 - (j)=The contemporary history contains no account of Miyan Mishk, although the above inscriptions disclose that Malik Mishk held the offices of Secretary, commander and keeper of the Royal key during the reign of Abul Hasan Qutb Shah. His name however shows him to be of African origin. His graveyard is situated near the Eastern end of the Old Bridge in a spacious enclosure. He appears to have been good natured and a philanthropist of no mean order. The karwanserai the mosque and the bath which were built by him are still intact and notwithstanding the lapse of over two centuries are still monuments of public utility. The bath is second to none in the City. On the facades of Eastern and western gateways, inscriptions No. 1.

2 and 3 contain the farmans of Abul Hasan Tanashah, describing in detail the revenues set apart for the maintenance of the tomb, the mosque and the bath. The 4th inscription fixed over the inner enclosure wall, which records the erection of a building (Royal Wardrobe) in 1035 A.H. (1625 A.D.) has no connection with the Malik's tomb. The fifth inscription over the southern doorway of the sepulchre also contains a farman of Abul The sixth inscription, bearing the epitaph, is set up at the northern end of the grave. The tomb stands on a platform 5 ft. high, and the grave chamber is entered by three doorways. The epigraphs are in Naskhl Shikasta and Tauqi' script.

A palace was also built by Malik Mishk in the village of Atapur, which is now in ruins.

- (j)=The tomb of Cheen Qalich Khan Bahadur is situated to the south of Golconda near Himayat Sagar within an open enclosure. This grave-yard, where other members of the Asafiyah dynasty are buried is surrounded by a wall of mud and plaster, and none of the graves bears any inscription. Close to the enclosure there is an incomplete building called the

Baradari of Nawab Nasirud-Dowlah Bahadur son of Asaf Jah I. The central tomb of the enclosure is of Chin Qalich Khan and the other two graves are of Iwaz Khan (right) and Mujahid Khan (left). About half a mile from this place the right hand of Chin Qalich Khan is buried in the village of Qismatpur, (where he fell dead by a canon ball during the siege of Golconda), which was recognised by means of his signet ring after he was buried here. On 28th January 1687 (1098 A.H.) during the last siege of Golconda, Emperor Aurangzeb ordered the fort to be attacked, and Khaja Mir Abid Khan alias Chin Qalich Khan Bahadur also took part in the attack as a commander of the Moghal army. tunately a canon ball of the enemy struck and carried away the right shoulder-blade of Qalich Khan, and Qalich Khan was removed to his tent for treatment. When the Emperor sent his Prime Minister Jumdatul-Mulk, Asad Khan, for enquiring after his health, the dresser was found at that time engaged in extracting the broken pieces of bones and stitching his wound, and Qalich Khan with perfect self composure was engaged in sipping coffee with the other hand; with all the medical aid at the disposal the wound proved to be fatal and three days later Qalich Khan expired. The Emperor Aurangzeb was much distressed over this sad occurance and under the Royal command his body was interred in the vicinity of Atapur where he fell dead during the siege of Golconda. The extreme fortitude with which Qalich Khan faced his death became a household story. He was respectable and of conciliatory demeanour and was held by all in high esteem. On the occasion of Aurangzeb's engagements in Bijapur, Qalich Khan deputed to Hyderabad for the collection Peshkash from Abul Hasan. His son, Mir Shahabuddin Khan alias Farzande-Be-Reo-Rang, Ghaziuddin Khan Feeroz Jung Bdr., had attained much prominence during the reign of Aurangzeb. He was married to the daughter of Nawab Sa'dullah Khan, the Prime Minister of Shah Jahan, and as a first issue of this union Mir Qamruddin Khan Bahadur, Nizamul Mulk Asaf Jah I, was born. The anniversary of Qalich Khan is observed here annually by the Sarf-i-Khas.

The two graves on either side of the grave of Qalich Khan are that of Iwaz Khan and Mujahid Khan. The full title of the former was Uzdud-Dowlah, Qusoor Jang, Muhammad Iwaz Khan Bahadur son of Uzdud-Dowlah. His original name was Khaja Momin Khan, and he had married the aunt of Asaf Jah I. For a considerable time he held the post of Nazim (Governor) of the province of Berar, later he was transferred from there by Asaf Jah I, in 1153 A.H. as Mutasaddi of Farkhunda Bunyad, Hyderabad, with full powers of dismissal and appointment on the contract of one crore of rupees per annum, and also the title of Muahmmad Iwaz Khan Bahadur was conferred on him. He had quelled the disturbances caused by Ali Qarawal and Loha Pandhrya at Masulipatam and Rajahmandry. He also being a devout and religious man was always bent on preventing intemperate things. The Begum Bazaar, was the property of the (Queen) mother of Nawab Nasir Jung Shahid, and all the toddy shops of that place which were a source of her revenue, were forcibly closed by the order of Iwaz Khan, its use being contrary to the Muhammadan law.

The Begam having been deprived of resourceful income lodged a bitter complaint against him with her husband, (Asaf Jah I), who to conciliate the Begam appointed Anwaruddin Khan Bahadur (who was the deposed Foujdar of Cikakol and Rajahmandry) in place of Iwaz Khan, as Subadar of Hyderabad¹. The latter Muhammad Mujahid Khan Bahadur was the brother of Ghaziuddin Khan, Feeroz Jung and a son of Chin Qalich Khan Bahadur. In 1095 A.H. when he had been to Bijapur in company with his brother Feeroz Jung, for supply of provision to the Army of Prince Azam, who was engaged in the siege of Bijapur, both of these brothers had to face enormous obstacles before they joined the Royal army. The Emperor Aurangzeb was extremely pleased when he heard of the valour evinced by these brothers in joining Azam's camp and consequently conferred many Royal bounties and other favours, and the following words uttered on the occasion by the Emperor, will be of special interest: - "As God Almighty has maintained the reputation of the house of Timur by the (untiring) endeavours of Feeroz Jung, May God preserve the honour of his descendants to the day of Judgment.2"

If you ponder well, is possessed by those who are bare-footed." In the room where Shams-Maula is buried in the red plaster are inscribed a number of Persian couplets and benedictory verses and Shiite Durud, but most of these inscriptions have been effaced.

Over the room of Riza Maula alias Ali Raza Husaini the following is fixed on a slab of black basalt:—

- (j)=This hillock is situated about 5 miles west of the city on the road leading to the tank of Mir Alam, and is the burial place of Syed Shah Imamuddin Husaini alias Mir Mahmood Nimatullahi, which is situated under a grand dome. He first came to Hyderabad from Najaf (Mesopotamia) during the reign of Sultan Abdullah Qutbshah and stayed on this hillock. Although he had no ostensible means of livelihood vet he lived without accepting the help of anyone. Besides he had several buildings erected on this hill, the masons who worked here were paid over and above the wages and the pregnant women-labourers were double the wages, consequently it was a general belief that the Saint had some supernatural means of income. He died on 13th Shaban 11001, although the exact date of his demise is not known. The Mujawirs observe his Urs (anniversary) on 11th and 12th Jamadil-awwal. His son Mir Shamsuddin alias Shams Moula, who was alive during the reign of Asaf Jah I, and who died on 14th Jamadil-Awal 1155 A.H. (1747 A.D.) in his eightieth year is also buried here. His son, Syed Shah Ali Riza Husaini, was renowned for miracles during the reign of Asaf Jah II. He died in 1215 A.H. (1800 A.D.) and is buried here. Miran, son of Shah Ali Riza Husaini, died in 1230 A.H. (1814 A.D) and is also buried here. It has no grant from the Government. Khurshid Jahi Paigah contributes a fixed amount for his anniversary.

(1) Gulzare-Asafiyah.

According to the Baghe-Char-Chaman (Lucknow edition, 1300 A.H.) No book contains a record of the year of his death, but in a corner of the room where his son Shams-Maula is buried it was inscribed in plaster that Mir Mahmood died on 6th Rabiul-Awwal 1090 A.H. When the author visited the place in 1345 A.H. the above record had however disappeared owing perhaps to the decadence of the plaster.

mortar without turret-parapets. The rest of the wall which is surmounted by turret parapets was done by Asaf Jah I. The circumference of the entire wall is 6 miles and the area is about 4½ miles; the bastions still hold cannons of the old pattern. A century after the erection of the wall it was extensively repaired by Bahadur Dil Khan Shujauddowlah, a governor of Hyderabad, during the reign of Asaf Jah II. On either sides of the river Musi the parapet wall and battlements have been tastefully renovated by the Hyderabad Improvement Trust-Board under the command of His Exalted Highness the Nizam, Asaf Jah VII, which has added considerably to the excellent view of the city.

The city wall had 13 gates and 13 doors as follows: —

 - (j)=After the fall of Hyderabad in 1098 A.H. the deposed King Abul Hasan was sent by the Emperor Aurangzeb to Daultabad in company with Mir Bahadur Dil titled Jan Supar Khan of Sabzwar who was the third son of Syed Muhammad titled Mukhtar Khan Sabzwari. After the return of Jan Supar Khan from Daulatabad he took charge of the Subadarship of Hyderabad from Roohullah Khan. He got the title of Jan Supar Khan after he successfully fought against Dara Shikoh; later he was appointed Kiladar of the fort of Bidar by Aurangzeb and ultimately he got the Subadarship of Hyderabad in which capacity he died in 1113 A.H. and was buried near Imli Mahal where his house was situated.

After his death his son Rustam Dil Khan was appointed Subadar of Hyderabad as a deputy of Prince Kam Baksh, later he was given Foujdarship of the Carnatic, (Bijapur) in 1116 A.H., and again in 1117 A.H., he was made Subadar of Hyderabad. After the demise of Emperor Aurangzeb in 1118 A.H., when Prince Kam Baksh came to Golconda from Bijapur, he was given an ovation by Rustam Dil Khan although the former's position had greatly diminished owing to the succession of Bahadur Shah to the throne of Delhi. Some of his confidents ill-advised him that Rustam Dil Khan. Saif Khan, Ahmad Khan and Ahsan Khan (Mir Malang) had plotted to imprison him. He became very suspicious and sent a note to Rustam Dil Khan to the effect that he should call on him the following morning together with his pen-case for writing a reply to a letter of Bahadur Shah. On Rustam Dil Khan's arrival Kam Bakhsh excused himself for breakfast and went inside asking him to wait in the chaplet. Immediately Rustam Dil Khan was taken prisoner and after 3 days he was mercilesly trampled to death by tying his body to the feet of an elephant. His body was interred close to his own house near Imli Mahal by the side of the grave of his father, where he had built his tomb in his Rustam Dil Khan's tomb is situated in the centre of a raised terrace and is made of black basalt. It is covered by a pierced trellised covering of black basalt. On the same terrace the grave of his father Jan Supar Khan is made of Ashlar on the Western side, but it has no covering. central portion of both these graves is filled with loose soil. The descendents of Rustam Dil Khan still inhabit these quarters and it has been related by one of them that an inscription slab was fixed over the covering of the grave of Rustam Dil Khan, which has since fallen. At present none of these graves bears any inscription. The only inscription which is fixed over the central arch of Kali Masjid, indicates that this mosque was built by Rustam Dil Khan one year after the demise of his father Jan Supar Khan. This small mosque is composed of 3 massive arches of Qutb Shahi style of architecture, but it contains no architectural beauty. On the Eastern end of the courtyard there is a small eistern for ablution which is enclosed by an iron railing. this railing the graves of Jan Supar Khan and Rustam Dil Khan are situated on a terrace.

are buried in the graveyard. Notably Nawab Sir Asman Jah Bahadur (Prime Minister); Nawab Sir Khurshed Jah Bahadur: Nawab Sir Vikarul Umara Bahadur (Prime Minister) Nawab Zafar Jung Bahadur, (Military Minister) are also buried here. The graves of Nawab Shamsul Umara III and of Lady Khurshid Jah Bahadur have been finished in exquisite styles. Several graves are of marble, covered by pierced marble screens, and finished in mother o'pearl, mosaic and other decorations. All these graves are situated in an extensive courtyard and the central gate of the enclosure has a Naubat Khana (place for beating drums at proper intervals). Hazrat Sved Hasan Barahna alias Barahna Shah Saheb, Majzoob (saint) came to Hyderabad from Northern India during the reign of Sultan Abdullah Qutbshah. He was a Khalifa and disciple of Sufi Sarmad of Delhi, and died here on 6th Jamadi-Sani 1064 A. H. (1653 A.D.) His chief disciple Malik Parast Khan built a small dome over the grave of Barahna Shah Saheb and he himself was buried here together with his sons.

Malik Parast Khan was one of the ministers of Sultan Muhammad Quli and Muhammad Qutb Shah, and later, Commandant of the Royal body guard of Sultan Abdullah and also Havaldar of Golconda fort. He died in Zilhej 1064 A.H., six months after the death of his spiritual head Barahna Shah Saheb. He left sixty sons and daughters out of whom five elder sons and eight sons-in-law were provided for by Sultan Abdullah in his household and for the rest of his family a salary of 4,000 huns was granted. During the reign of Sultan Muhammad Shah Bahmani (1358-1375 A.D.) this fort was made over by means of a sanad by the Rajah of Warangal to the Bahmani Kings. Later in 1518 A.D. (924 A.H.) this was ranked among the important forts of the Bahmani kingdom, and in the same year after the death of Sultan Mahmood Shah Bahmani when other Governors had cast down the yolk of the Bahmani Kings and 'Barid Shahi' was established at Bidar, Sultan Quli, the Governor of Telingana also proclaimed his independence and made Golconda his capital. Sultan Quli after constructing the boundary wall of the fort, the Jamay Masjid (Safa Mosque), and the Royal palace, (Dawlatkhanae 'Ali) and other buildings, named this fort, as Muhammadnagar. The elevation of this fort is 400 ft. and the circumference of the fort wall is 4 miles containing 87 semi-circular bastions, 50 to 60 ft. high. Certain blocks of granite which have been used in the wall must weigh at least a ton each, they are firmly cemented together and some are bound with clamps. The fort contains the following 8 huge gates which are studded with sharp iron knobs, intended to prevent elephants from battering them in.

 - (j)=According to the Tarikhe Qutbshahi, Sultan Quli died in his ninety-ninth year thus his year of birth comes to 849 A. H. Although his year of birth is not given in any contemporary history. After the death of his master Mahmood Shah Bahmani in 924 A.H. Sultan

Quli declared his independence, and this may be reckoned as his first regnal year, although other Governors of Bahmani provinces had declared their independence in the lifetime of their Royal master. Ferishta and other historians considering that Sultan Quli must have also followed suite, have erroneously recorded Sultan Quli's assumption of regal title in 917 or 918 A.H. Sultan Quli who was born at Sadabad (Hamadan) descended from the ruling family of Qara Yousuf, Turkomans and his lineage ends with Amir Tara Beg son of Aghaz Khan son of Yafis son of the prophet Noah.¹ When he first came to the Deccan from Persia, he was taken into Royal favour by Sultan Mahmood Shah Bahmani. recognition of his valour and devotion he first received the title of Khawas Khan and then Qutbul-Mulk and was appointed Governor of Telingana. After the declaration of independence his territories extended in the North as far as the Godavari, in the East as far as Orissa and the sea coast and in the South as far as river Kistna. He was very fond of architecture; besides the Golconda fort a big city was constructed there by him which was composed of fine buildings. He was the originator of that style of architecture, called the Qutbshahi Style, which is a combination of Persian, Hindu, and Pathan styles of Architecture. When he attained the ripe age of 99, and his heir-apparent Yar Kuli Jamshed became tired of the length of his father's reign, on Sunday, the 2nd Jamadi Sani 950 A.H. (1543 A.D.) he instigated Mir Mahmud Hamadani, the Qiladar, who murdered the King while he was in the act of prostration in the Assembly Mosque of the fort. According to the Tarikhe Zufra the Qiladar inflicted 23 wounds on the king while he was engaged in evening (Asr) prayers. The chronogram of his death is "Faiyaze Hind" (950 A.H.) and the following Quatrain also gives the date of his death:—

This dome was creeted by Sultan Quli during his life time for his own internment according to the prevalente ustom. It is situated on an elevated square terrace, 100 ft. each way, and internally it is octagonal and the inner dimensions of the hall are 30 ft. 10 inches each way. It is crowned by a circular dome and externally, on account of the terrace, it appears to be a square building, the walls of the basement storey being 20 ft. high. In the inscription No. 4 the word (شهيد) corroborates the incident of his assassination which occured in 950 A.H. in the assembly mosque of the fort. The word Bar Malik (the great Malik) which occurs in this inscription was according to 'Tarikeh Farkhunda,' 'Muhammad Qutbshahi 'and 'Zufra, "1 a pet name of Sultan Quli, by which all the high and low inhabitants of the Deccan used to call him. This dome contains 3 graves and on the outside terrace 21 graves of polished black basalt, all uninscribed, are situated. These domes of Golconda Kings were held in such veneration that whenever any criminal took refuge there, he was given amnesty and during the Qutbshahi period the tombs were always furnished with expensive carpets and lamps and a number of Qurans were kept on supports, which were recited by the readers at appointed intervals. The domes of ruling kings distinguished by spires of golden crescents fixed above the centre of the dome and those of other members of the family and of Khaja-Sara's had no such sign and were built on comparatively lower terraces, and in those days it was not possible for every layman to have access to these tombs. Owing to years of neglect the condition of these tombs had become deplorable and Sir Salar Jung the great, after getting them thoroughly conserved had a nice garden laid out and a compound wall built, and posted a guard over the main gate. These tombs are now constantly repaired by the Sarf-i-Khas Mubarak, and the garden is well kept. In the Qutbshahi days this place was called "Langar-e-Faiz Athar," (A place for the bountiful entertainment) where the poor were entertained every afternoon and this custom of entertaining the poor in this place was also observed during the lifetime of Sultan Quli.

It contains a number of cisterns for hot and cold water, with running pipes of mortar for the supply of water, and the shrouding platforms are decorated with Mosaic. The dead bodies of Kings and of Royal family used to be taken out of the fort through Banjara gate and brought to this bath for ablution after which they were carried to the last resting place with requisite pomp attended by a great retinue.

(1543 A.D.) and after a reign of 7 years died of cancer in 957 A.H. (1550 A.D.). He was the 2nd son of Sultan Quli I, Hyder Quli and Abdul Karim his elder and third brothers respectively, had predeceased Sultan Quli. His fourth brother Qutbuddin who was made heir-apparent was blinded by Jamshed soon after he ascended the throne. The fifth brother Daulat Khan known as Diwana.

Malik (The mad Malik) was a maniac. He died in the reign of Ibrahim Qutbshah IV, who was the sixth and last brother of Jamshed.

Jamshed Quli was a brave and diplomatic king, whose soundness of diplomacy was repeatedly manifested in the wars between Ali Barid, Ibrahim Adilshah and Burhan Nizam Shah. At the outset he fought against these kings, and broke up this triple alliance and ultimately assuming the position of an arbitrator he liberated Ali Barid from the confinement of Adil Shah and re-established him in the kingdom of Bidar, as a result of which Ali Barid remained his staunch friend and supporter to the end of his life. The dome of Jamshed contains two more graves none of which bears any inscription. His own tomb not being of black basalt and its external form being a little dissimilar to that of his family, there is a difference of opinion as regards the identity of Jamshed's tomb, but according to the authorities of 'Tarikhe-Farkhunda' and 'Muhammad Qutbshahi' which, distinctly lays down that "Jamshed was buried in the neighbourhood of the dome of his father," there remains very little doubt as to its identity owing to its close proximity to the dome of Sultan Quli. The following Quatrain gives the chronogram of the death of Jamshed: -

Jamshed was fond of poetry some specimens of which are given below.

- (1) The Mausoleum of Saif Khan is situated close to the Lal Tekri or Fatch Maidan of Golconda, where the victorious forces of Aurangzeb had assembled after the fall of the Fort and which is said to have been the Parade ground of Qutb Shahi forces. The grand dome which is built of ashlar and concrete, stands on an elevated square terrace. The sarcophagus of the tomb of Saif Khan which is in the centre of the dome, is of highly polished black basalt and bears the following inscription in Naskh script. (New).

قال الله سبحا نه تبارك و تعالے قل يا عباد مى الذ مى اشر فوا على انفسهم . الا تقنطو اسمى رحمة الله الله الله يغفر الذنو ب جميعاً انه هو الغفورا لرحيم - صدى الله العلى العظيم وصدى قرسوله النبى الكريم و نحن على ذلك من الشاهدين و الحمد لله رب العالمين وصلى الله على خير خلقه محمد و الدا جمعين -

It appears that the original tomb is situated in the subterranean vault which is however closed. The terrace is surrounded with several other tombs of unknown personages. The general condition of this building deserves the attention of the State Archæological Department.

According to "Muhammad Qutbshahi," after the advent of Ibrahim Qutbshah, Saif Khan had to quit the country in 957 A.H. (1550 A.D.). He fought many battles in Berar and Ahmadnagar and was ultimately suffocated to death by the orders of Husain Nizam Shah in 964 A.H. The of Jamshed Quli Qutb Shah, was made Vakilus-Sultan (Plenipotentiary). But owing to the high-handedness of Saif Khan the nobles of the court invited Ibrahim Quli, the sixth son of Sultan Quli, (who after the accession of Jamshed Quli, had sought refuge with Ramraj of Vijyanagar), and ultimately with the assistance of Naigwars, Ibrahim Quli was proclaimed King of Golconda on 12th Rajab 957 A.H. (1550 A.D.). It is not recorded in the contemporary writings what became of Subhan Quli and when and where his days ended, but midway between the domes of Sultan Quli and Jamshed Quli there exists a dome of " Chhote Malik" which is said to contain the remains of Subhan Quli although it bears no inscription.

- (j)=After the ephemeral reign of Subhan Quli, Ibrahim, son of Sultan Quli I, succeeded to the throne of Golconda with the help of Naigwars and in acknowledgment of the same, Jagdeva Rao, the leader of Naigwars was made his Vizier by Ibrahim but soon afterwards he devised a plan to dethrone Ibrahim in favour of his brother Daulat Khan alias Diwana Malik (the Maniac Malik) who was then a prisoner in Bhongir fort.

Ibrahim became aware of this intrigue at the nick of time and Jagdeva Rao fled precipitately first to Burhan Nizamshah in Berar and later to Ramraj at Vijvanagar and contemporaneously Ibrahim had to fight a decisive battle in company with the Kings of Bijapur and Ahmadnagar against Ramraj of Vijaynagar, at Talicotta, in 952 A.H., which marked the death of Ramraj and the complete overthrow of the Vijyanagar Kingdom. Afterwards Shitab Khan one of the officers of Ibrahim conquered Warangal and annexed it to Golconda. Sultan Ibrahim was a capable and vigilant ruler, during his reign a number of mosques karwanserais, hospitals, and tanks were constructed, and the fort of Golconda¹ was strengthened. Several palaces, gardens, the Langar or Katura Hauz and Kala Chabutra of Golconda, the town and tank of Ibrahimpatan and the Katwa (bund) of Budwell bear testimony to his philanthropic actions to the present day. His territories extended from Rajahmandri and Cassimcotta to the sea-cost, encircling the whole of the Western part of India within his Kingdom. The three famous calligraphists of his time were Muhammad of Isphahan, Ismail, son of Arab² of Shiraz, and Taqiuddin Muhammad Salih of Bahrien. ductions of these masters, who have left a store of Naskh, Thulth, and Nastaliq inscriptions with Tauqi' and Tughra styles of the highest order in this city. During the reign of this King Golconda had become a central market for the Turkish, Persian and Arab traders. After a benign reign of 30 years Ibrahim died in 988 A.H., leaving behind him three daughters and six sons all of whom had attained their majority, besides some minor ones. His first son Abdul Qadir alias Shah Saheb died in his 21st year at Devarkonda fort. wherefrom his remains were brought to Golconda to be interved in the Langare-faiz athar (the Tombs). Masjid (City) and Darush-Shifa were also built during his reign. According to the Tarikhe-Zufra the following buildings were also constructed during his reign and about 70 lacs Huns were spent over them: Ilahi Mahal, Baghe Muhammadi, Banat Ghat, Kohe Toor, Naddi Mahal, Hina Mahal, Dad Mahal, Khudadad Mahal, Langar Khana and Ashur Khana. dome in which his remains rest was built during his lifetime. His relations with Shah Abbas I. Safavi of Persia became very friendly and consequently a Persian Embassy first came to the Deccan during his regime. Muhammad Quli was a philanthropic ruler, and had remitted a number of taxes to his subjects. After a peaceful reign of 31 years he died in his 49th year in 1020 A. H. (1611 A.D.). His grand dome with extensive double terraces is second to none among the Tombs. The elevation of the terrace is 13 ft. 6 in. The upper terrace is 200 ft. each way and the lower 126 ft. 3 inches. outer dimensions of the dome are 71 ft. 3 inches each way and the height of the colonnades is 22 ft. There are two entrance doors to the dome on the southern and eastern sides and the dimension of the inner dome is 33 ft. 3 inches each way. A flight of steps leads to the tomb-proper which is situated in a vault below the terrace, the vaults of other Kings being closed. The year of his death may be had from the following quatrain, the last two verses of which bear the chronogram:-

معمد رفت چون ازدا رفانی * و صال آن شه دین سال فبانس ز قطب فضل و فضل عام جستم * دگربار * زعالی جاه فیاض سنه ۲۰۱۰ه سنه ۲۰۱۰ He was also fond of Persian and Urdu poetry and "Qutbshah" was his pen-name. The following are a few of his Persian poems:—

The Baradari and the mosque may be reached by climbing three storeys containing about 70 steps. On careful investigation of the precincts was found that Ibrahim Bagh of Sultan Ibrahim Qutbshah (d. 988 A.H.), terminates at the base of the mosque and it extends as far as "Mahallat," (the Royal Palaces), which are situated a few furlongs behind the mosque and where ruins of lofty palaces may still be seen. It is interesting to note that the garden with a few mangoe trees is still called Ibrahim Bagh. It may therefore be inferred that the Baradari and the mosque were built later, during the reigns of Sultan Abdullah and Muhammad Qutbshah, on the outskirts of the garden and served as the main entrance to Ibrahim Bagh and during the construction of these lofty edifices the garden must have been in a bloomy condition and a favourite royal resort.

- (j)=Sultan Muhammad Qutbshah was born on 23rd Rajab 1001 (1593 A.D.). He was the only son of Prince Mirza Muhammad Amin and Khanum Agha and a nephew and son-in-law of Muhammad Quli Qutbshah. According to the Tawarikhe-Farkhunda (MSS) on the day of his birth the reigning sovereign Sultan Muhanmad Quli Qutbshah, prevailed upon his brother Prince Mirza Muhamamd Amin, to let him adopt the boy as he had no male issue, asserting that he being young would have many more sons; but Prince Amin procrastinated until four years later after the death of Prince Amin, Muhammad Quli took the boy in his own charge and appointed Qazi Muhammad Samnani for his tuition and also Yousuf Saheb, a famous soldier who used to teach swordsmanship, archery and horse-riding to the whole city, was appointed to teach these arts to the young prince, who had also become the heir-apparent to the throne. This Yousuf Saheb died in 1028 A.H. and was buried near Nampalli where his tomb, is held in great veneration. When the young prince reached the age of 14, the daughter of Sultan Muhammad Quli was given in marriage to him in 1015 A.H. One Mirak Moin of Sabzwar composed a quatrain on this occasion, the last hemistich contains the year of marriage a 1.14 (marriage ا عید مولودی و بزم شه و عقد). When he attained his majority he ascended the throne of his uncle in his 21st year. Mir Muhammad Momin of Subzwar composed a long poem, a few couplets of which are given below. The eighth hemistich gives the year of the accession.

Sultan Muhammad was a great friend of learning and was a very pious King. He used to recite one chapter of the Quran every morning and invariably used to finish the recitation of the whole of the Quran every month. of his time was spent in the company of learned men. was the founder of the famous Mecca Masjid, and an initial amount of 40,000 huns¹ was spent by him on this stately The histories of this period were first written during his reign, notably the Tarikhe-Sultan Muhammad Qutbshahi (MSS) which, contains an exhaustive and authoritative account of the inauguration of Qutbshahi dynasty until 1020 A.H. and the Hadiqatus-Salatin Qutbshahi (MSS) which is really a compendium of the above history, was written by Nizamuddin, during the reign of his son Sultan Abdullah His contemporary Moghal Emperor was Jahangir, and during his reign Hyderabad was for the first time visited by a Prince of the Moghal blood in 1025 A.II. Khurram (Shah Jahan) made Muhammad Qutbshah pay him a Peshkash of 14 lacs of rupees for his father, as an indemnity for the hostile assistance rendered by him to Nizam Shah of Ahmadnagar, against Jahangir².

This pious king died after a short reign of 15 years in 1035 A.H., (1625 A.D.). This Chronogram was composed by Ibne-Khatoon (No. 22) on this occasion (ها معنى به على بيه العطال المعنى). He left four sons and one daughter. The first issue was Prince Abdullah Mirza (Qutbshah VII) the second was a daughter who was married in 1042 A.H. to Sultan Muhammad Adil Shah of Bijapur. The third was Prince Ibrahim Mirza, who was born of the daughter of Sultan Ibrahim Adilshah of Bijapur and who died in the second regnal year of Sultan Abdullah Qutbshah and was buried in the dome of Muhammad Qutbshah. The author of Hadiqatus-Salatin relates this curious incident that on the day of Ibrahim Mirza's birth, the Ilahi Mahal, Muhammadi Mahal and Hydar Mahal which were built in seven spacious storeys by Sultan Muhammad Quli, caught fire and the whole building was burnt to ashes. The fourth and fifth were Prince Sultan Quli Mirza and Prince Mirza born of his favourite wife Khurshid Bibi, who had predeceased her husband and was buried close to the dome of Sultan Abdullah. The above mentioned Prince Sultan Quli Mirza had attempted to commit suicide by taking powdered diamond in 1047 A.H. but owing to the timely succour of Sultan Abdullah the Royal physicians administered antidotes and he was recovered. He died a natural death in 1052 A.H. and was buried in the dome of Muhammad Qutbsh ahVI. The Mousoleum of Sultan Muhammad Qutbshah VI, ranks next in grandeur to the tomb of Muhammad Quli. It comprises a square hall, 63' 4" each way and the width of the colonnade is 19'8". The facade of this dome had enamelled tiles, traces of which still exist. Besides the tomb of Sultan Muhammad Qutbshah there are five more1 graves in this dome, two of which have been cracked by the effects of lightning. Of these graves the two, which bear inscriptions are herein noticed in their chronological order (vide 55 and 61) and the rest are uninscribed. Sultan Muhammad Qutbshah was also fond of poetry like his uncle, his nom-de-guerre was "Urooji" and "Zillul-lah," a selection of his poems is given below.

⁽¹⁾ In the Western sofa are buried Shah Khundkar and Khanum Agha, the third tomb belongs to Prince Sultan Quli Mirza son of Sultan Muhammad Qutbshah who died in Zil Qada 1052 A.H.

Among the small graves of childern one belongs to the young Prince Ibrahim Mirza, son of Muhammad Qutbshah, who died in the 2nd regnal year of Abdullah Qutbshah and the other is the tomb of the seven-month old son of Abdullah Qutbshah who expired on 29th Jamadi II 1042 Hijri. - (1) Mr. Yazdani's decipherment of this inscription does not stand the historical test. He reads it thus and he describes the grave to be that of an infant grandson of Muhammad Qutbshah by his daughter Kulthoom. But according to the Hadiqatus Salatin, Muhammad Qutbshah had only one daughter and she was given in marriage to Muhammad Adil shah of Bijapur, where she remained as the Queen of that realm; consequently this grave cannot be that of his grandson, by his so-called daughter Kulthoom. In the author's humble opinion this tomb belongs to Kulthoom, who was the grand-daughter of Muhammad Qutbshah, and the father of this child was the son of his favourite wife Khurshid Bibi and who according to "Hadiqa," died in 1052 A.H. Moreover if Mr. Yazdani's decipherment is taken to be correct there remains no alternative but to attribute the suffix of (خلد الله تعالى) towards Muhammad Qutbshah, in 1037 A.H. which is the year of the epitaph vide the top slab), although he had expired in 1035 A.H. and the words (خلد الله تعالي) according to the Arabic philology being patent words for the living Kings and Princes, cannot be assigned to a dead body. It therefore follows that the suffix of (خلد الله تعالى) relates to the (ا برن) son of Muhammad Qutbshah, whose name was Sultan Quli Mirza and who was alive at the time; and the prefixes of (مغفرت بناه) and (مغفرت بناه) are quite appropriate for Muhammad Qutbshah in 1037 rather than (غلدا لله تعالي).  - (j)=The twin pavillions of the Hakims are situated side by side and are open on all sides. The sarcophagus of these domes are of highly polished black basalt. Bats have made their nests in the roof as a result of which it is always filled with filth and offensive smell. Although the names of these Hakims are not mentioned on the grave, but they are said to have been favourite physicians of Sultan Abdullah. The author is inclined to assign these tombs to Hakim Nizamuddin Ahmad Gilani, Hakimul Mulk, who was appointed a Royal physician in 1045 A.H., by Sultan Abdullah in place of Hakim Gabriel, on 6,000 huns per annum, and to Hakim Abdul Jabbar Gilani, who also became a favourite Hakim of the Court in 1045 A.H., and being very handsome, he was also appointed to read Hadith in the presence of the King during the month of Moharrum³.

About 2 miles North of Tolichauki over the top of the hill of Hakim Pet, are situated a small Baradari and a dome with a mosque. The dome contains grave of an unknown Hakim³ of the reign of Abdullah; the sarcophagus is one peice of oblong black basalt measuring $(4'\ 3'' \times 2\frac{1}{2}')$ with the following inscription.

"The command is for God. The year 1059 (A. H.)"

In the tower of a tank below the Baradari some Persian couplets were engraved in plaster, which have now become hopelessly obliterated. Out of many I could with much difficulty, decipher the following of Hafiz.

چه گویمت که بمیخانهدوش مستوخراب * سروش عالم غیبم چه مژدها داد است کم است بلند نظرها هبازسد و نشین * نشیمن تونه این گنج محنت آباد است تر از کنگره عرش می زنند سفیر * ندانمت کم درین خاکدان چه افتاداست نصیحتی کنمت یا دگیرود و رعمل آر * کم این حدیث زپیرطریقتم یا داست مجودر ستی عهد ازجهان سست نهاد * کم این عجوزه عروسی هزار داماد است

⁽¹⁾ and (2) Vide Hadiqatus Salatin (MSS) and Muhammad Qutbshah (MSS). (3) I am inclined to assign this to Hakim Gabriel.

The hill commands a fine birdseye view, but it could only be reached after walking about a mile and a half in the uneven paddy fields.

The author considers it a piece of singular good fortune for having been able to trace this inscription in a book¹ in which it has been completely reproduced, thus the missing link of the first line, which owing to obvious reasons was omitted by Mr. Yazdani (in E. I. "The exalted order (of Emperor Aurangzeb) was issued to Mir Miran that he should establish himself and carry the intrenchment and mines to the ditch, as at this place was a small bastion But the order—obeyed by the world and respected in the universe, of the Lord of the time, the emperor of the period, the just Sultan, the shadow of God, Abul Muzaffar, Abul Mansur, Abul Ghazi, Sultan Abdullah Qutbshah, to the wazir of the wazirs of the time, the confidence of the Royal court, the trust of the State, the Khan of high rank, the commander-in-chief, Musa Khan, had the honour of issuing to this effect, that he himself be at the spot and occupy himself in repelling the enemy day and night. Thereupon the exalted Khan with all caution was engaged day and night in checking the enemy. In the meantime by the divine decree a gun shot struck the body of Mir Miran in such a manner that he expired in that very intrenchment, and three days after his death peace was concluded. the siege had been raised the supreme orders were issued to the above named Khan that a large bastion be built at this place, so that the enemy might not get an opportunity to dig intrenchments and mines. In obedience to the auspicious, exalted order, through the efforts of the aforesaid Khan, this large bastion was completed within a short time, in the year one thousand and seventy seven (A.H.) and the architect's name (is) Dharmachar."

 - (j)=This bastion is associated with several historical incidents of the period. The author will endeavour to deal with each of them categorically. It is well known that Mir Muhammad Saeed of Isphahan, the Mir Jumla of Sultan Abdullah Qutbshah had become arrogant by obtaining abnormal influence over the king. His young son, Mir Muhammad Amin, one day came to the Court in a drunken state and in violation of all etiquette and decency fell asleep on the Royal Masnad (Throne) and vomited there, which intensely offended the King, who ordered him to be kept in confi-His father being much annoyed nement. and heart-broken went to Prince Aurangzeb (Viceroy of the Deccan) at Aurangabad in the 29th regnal year of the Emperor Shah Jahan, and was received into royal favour by the recommendations of the Prince. He was soon elevated to the rank of Panjhazari (Commander of five thousand horse) and his son Muhammad Amin (then in confinement at Hyderabad) got the rank of Dohazari, and a Farman was despatched through Qazi Muhammad Kashmiri to Sultan Abdullah Qutbshah to the effect that the family of Mir Jumla should not be molested. The King having been much irritated by this pressure at once confiscated all the property of Muhammad Amin and placed a stronger guard over his household. When the news of the utter disregard of the Royal Farman reached Aurangzeb, he sent to Hyderabad his elder son Sultan Muhammad as advance guard on 8th Rabi-ul-Awal 1066 A.H., and he himself left his head-quarters on 3rd Rabi-us-Sani 1066 A.H. On hearing this Sultan Abdullah released Muhammad Amin and his mother and sent them to Sultan Muhammad who had encamped 24 miles off the city, but as their property was not returned, Sultan Muhammad making this a pretext advanced towards the city and Sultan Abdullah fled to Golconda on 5th Rabius-Sani. Sultan Muhammad pitching his camp near Husain Sagar tank sacked the city. Sultan Abdullah tried his best to evade the invasion by sending valuable presents of jewellery and elephants, but as Aurangzeb had joined his son it was resolved to attack the fort, till at last after a siege of a few days. occurred the incident of the death of Mir Miran as related in the above inscription and Sultan Abdullah besides furnishing the arrears of Peshkash sent all the confiscated property of Muhammad Amin and in addition sent his elder son-in-law Mir Ahmed in company with his own mother to Aurangzeb. The old woman differences by agreeing to the settled all marriage of the daughter of Sultan Abdullah with Sultan Muhammad and after the wedding ceremony had the Princess sent from Golconda to the camp of Aurangzeb with a dowry of 10 lacs of rupees. After this settlement Aurangzeb with his son and daughter-in-law returned to Aurangabad on 7th Rajab 1066 A.H., and Sultan Abdullah ordered Musa Khan to erect the Musa Burj by the inclusion of the small hillock in the fortification of the fort¹.

The following peace treaty, executed in 1066 A.H. by Sultan Abdullah, throws a flood of light over the issues of the conclusion of peace and is a record of considerable historical importance. It also fully corrobarates the version of Khafi Khan that owing to straitened circumstances Abdullah Qutbshah was forced to open negotiations for peace, by promising to pay the arrears of tribute and giving his own daughter in marriage to Prince Sultan Muhammad. The undermentioned treaty also lays down that Abdullah Qutbshah had designated his newly made son-in-law, the heirapparent to the throne of Golconda after his own demise. The original Persian treaty is reproduced here from the Tarikhe-Zurfa (MSS) of Girdhari Lal.

Another version of this famous siege (1655 A.D.) related by the French traveller Bernier, who had come to India in 1655 A.D. and visited Golconda in 1667 A.D., i.e., eleven years after this siege, is reproduced below.

Besides corroborating many facts which have been enumerated above, it throws a flood of light on certain political aspects of the period. It also lays down that the surprise visit of Emperor Aurangzeb to Golconda was a result of negotiations of Mir Muhammad Saeed, the Qutbshahi Mir Jumla,² and that the important stipulation of the peace treaty was the marriage of the daughter of Sultan Abdullah to Sultan Muhammad, the son of Aurangzeb, with a heavy indemnity and a promise of making the newly made sonin-law his successor; and the introduction of Shah Jahan's arms on the coins of Golconda.

⁽²⁾ After leaving the service of the king of Golconda he went over to the moghals and died as Governor of Bengal.

King of Golkonda had for his Vazier and General of his armies this Emir Jumla, who was Persian by nation, and very famous in the Indies. He was not a man of great extraction, but beaten in business, a person of excellent parts, and a great captain. He had the wit of amassing great treasures not only by the administration of the affairs of this opulent Kingdom, but also by navigation and trade, sending ships into very many parts, and causing the diamond mines, which he alone had farmed under many borrowed names, to be wrought with extraordinary diligence. So that people discoursed almost of nothing but of the riches of Emir Jumla, and of the plenty of his diamonds, which were not reckoned but by sacks. He had also the skill to render himself very -potent and considerable, entertaining, besides the armies of the King, very good troops for his particular, and above all a very good artillery, with abundance of Franguys and Christians to manage it. In a word, he grew so rich, and so puissant, especially after he had found a way to enter into the Kingdom of Karnates (Carnatic) and to pillage all the ancient churches of the idols of that country, that the King of Golkonda became jealous of it, and prepared himself to unsaddle him; and that the more, because he could not bear what was reported of him, as if he had used too great familiarity with the Queen his mother, that was yet beauteous. Yet he discovered nothing of his design to any, having patience, and waiting till Emir came to the court, for he was then in the kingdom of Karnates with his army. But one day, when more particular news was brought him of what had passed between his mother and him he had not power enough to dessemble any longer, but was transported by choler to fall to invectives and menaces; whereof Emir was soon made acquainted, having at the court abundance of his wife's kindred, and all his nearest relations and best friends possessing the principal offices. The Kings' mother also, who did not hate him, had speedy information of the same; which obliged Emir, without delay, to write to his only son Mahmet Emir (Amin) Kan, who then was about the King, requiring him to do the best he could to withdraw with all speed from the court, under some pretence of hunting or the like, and to come and join with him. Mahmet Emir Kan, failed not to attempt divers ways; but the king causing him to be narrowly observed, none of them all would succeed. This very much preplexed Emir, and made him take a strange resolution, which cast the king in great danger to lose his crown and life; so true it is, that he who knows not to dissemble, knows not how to reign. writ to Aurangzeb, who was then in Daultabad, the capital of the Deccan, about fifteen or sixteen day's journey from Golkonda, giving him to understand, that the king of Golkonda did intend to ruin him and his family, notwithstanding the signal services he had done him, as all the world knew; which was an unexampled injustice and ingratitude, that this necessitated him to take his refuge to him, and to entreat him, that he would receive him into his protection; that for the rest, if he would follow his advice, and confidence him he would so dispose affairs, that he would at once put into his hands both the King and Kingdom of Golkonda. thing he made very easy, using the following discourse "you need but take four or five thousand horse, of the best of your army, and to march with expedition to Golkonda spreading a rumour by the way, that it is an ambassador of Chah -(Shah) Jehan that goes in haste, about considerable matters, to speak with the King of Bag-nageur (Bhag-Nagar).

"The Dabir, who is he that is first to be addressed unto, to make anything known unto the King, is allied to me and my creature, and altogether mine; take care of nothing but to march with expedition, and I will so order it, that without making you known, you shall come to the gates of Bag-Nageur; and when the King shall come out to receive the letters, according to custom, you may easily seize on him, and afterwards of all his family, and do with him what shall seem good to you, in regard that his house of Bag-Nageur, where he commonly resides, is unwalled and unfortified." He added, that he would make this enterprise upon his own charges, offering him fifty thousand rupies a day (which is about five and twenty thousand crowns) during the whole time of the march.

"Aurangzeb, who looked only for some such occasion, had no mind at all to lose so fair a one. He soon undertook the expedition, and so fortunately managed his enterprize, that he arrived at Bag-nageur without being otherwise known than as an ambassador of Chah-Jehan. The King of Golkonda being advertised of the arrival of this pretended ambassador, came forth into a garden, according to custome, received him with honour, and having unfortunately put himself into the hands of his enemy, ten or twelve slaves, gurgis, were ready to fall upon and to seize his person, as had been projected; but that a certain Omrah, touched with tenderness, could not forbear to cry out, though he was of the party, and a creature of the Emir, "Doth not your Majesty see that this is Aurangzeb? Away or you are taken." Whereat the King being frightened, slips away, and gets hastily on horseback, riding with all his might to the fortress of Golkonda, which is but a short league from thence. Aurangzeb seeing he was defeated in his design, yet was not therefore discomposed; but seized at the same time on the royal house, taketh all the rich and good things he finds there; yet sending to the King all his wives, (which over all the Indies is very religiously observed), and goeth to besiege him in his fortress. But as the siege, for want of having brought along all necessaries, held on long, and lasted above two months, he received order from Chah-Jehan to raise it, and to retire into Deccan again; so that although the fortress was reduced to extremities, for want of victuals and ammunition of war, he found himself obliged to abandon his enterprise. He knew very well, that it was Dara (Shikoh (and Begam (Jahan Ara) that had induced Chah-Jehan to send these orders, from the apprehension they entertained that he would become too powerful; but in the meantime he never discovered any resentment of it, saying only, that he ought to obey the orders of his father. Yet he withdrew not, without causing underhand payment to be made to him of all the charges of his expedition; besides, he married his son Sultan Mahmood, to the eldest daughter of that King, with a promise that he would make him his successor, causing him also to give for a dowry the fortress and the appurtenances of Bamguyre (Ramgir). He also made the King consent that all the silver money, that should be coined for the future in that kingdom, should bear on one side the arms of Chah-Jehan; and that Emir Jumla should withdraw, with his whole family, all his goods, troops, and artillery¹."

The bastion is semi-circular in shape and consists of three storeys. The solid blocks of granite employed in its construction, which must weigh over a ton each, are firmly cemented together. The expenses of the erection of this bastion amounted to Rs. 5,94,000². The inscription states that a shot from the guns of the fort hit the Moghal Commander and Bakhshi Mir Miran (Asadullah Khan Bukhari) as a result of which he expired on the spot and three days after his death peace was concluded. Another historical personage mentioned in the inscription is Musa Khan (mahaldar) who had played the role of a Commander in the seige. Toli Masjid (No. 23) was built by the same Khan in 1082 A.H., and after the death of Abdullah Qutbshah when the question of his succession arose, he voted in favour of Abul Hasan Tanashah.

This mosque which is by far the most splendid and the largest mosque of the fort is situated close to the mausoleum of Hayat Bakhsh Begam and as the year of erection of this mosque and the date of death of the Begam is identical, it may therefore be safely asserted that it was built as an adjunct to her tomb. The above mentioned inscription is carved in the prayer-niche in the

It has platforms of 237 ft., each way and is surrounded by seven arches on each side. The date of his birth is given as 28th Shawal 10231 A.H. (1614 A.D.) and the date of his accession 14th Jamadi-I 10352 A.H. (1626 A.D.). During the reign of this King, through the good administration of Mir Muhammad Saeed, Mir Jumla, his dominions had reached as far as Carnatic, but the ostentations of Mir Jumla offended the King and he had to seek refuge with Prince Aurangzeb, which brought about the siege of 1066 A.H. and which has been fully described in The difference was ultimately settled No. 66. by giving the King's daughter in marriage to Sultan Muhammad son of Prince Aurangzeb and acknowledging his son-in-law as heirapparent to the throne of Golconda, but he predeceased Sultan Abdullah and this term of the treaty was fulfilled in the 31st regnal year of the Emperor Aurangzeb, when he became instrumental in exterminating the Qutbshahi dynasty in 1098 A.H. (1672 A.D.).
- (1) Mir Momin of Astarabad composed this chronogram of his birth (کام بغش جا نها ۱۰۱۳ ه) and his son Amjaduddin composed the following (خلد ا لله ملكه زبد ا ۱۰۲۳ هـ).

He was succeeded by his third son-in-law Abul Hasan Tanashah. Abdullah Qutbshah was a just and liberal king, but was not acute in judgment which resulted in political troubles. He was also fond of learning and architecture. The celebrated Persian Lexicon "Burhane-Qaati', " was compiled during his reign and dedicated to him. The accompanying photograph of this king has been copied from the British Museum collection.

and reigned for fourteen years. The last siege of Golconda by the Emperor Aurangzeb marked the extinction of the Qutbshahi dynasty and the annexation of the Kingdom of Golconda to the Moghal Empire and Tanashah was confined in the Daultabad fort as a royal captive. It has been a curious coincidence in the History of the Deccan that the Amirs of Sadah (century) after rebelling with the Tughlaq King first declared their independence in Daulatabad by electing Ismail-Mukh, their first King and simultaneously after the dismemberment of the Bahmani Kingdom and the declaration of independence of the Provincial Governors when the last independent King of the Deccan lost Kingdom he had to pass his last days in the same place (Daulatabad) in confinement, where the first Islamic Kingdom of the Deccan had come into existence. The construction of the present mausoleum according to the practice in vogue at the time was taken in hand by Abul Hasan Tanashah during his lifetime, but owing to the Moghal invasions he could not complete the building and he also could not be buried here, but after his demise in the Chini Mahal of Daulatabad fort in 1111 A.H., (1699 A.D.), he was buried in the graveyard of Hazrat Syed Shah Raju Qattal father of Syed Muhammad Gesudaraz Husaini. Abdullah and the other grave next to his tomb bears no name of the deceased. The father of Mir Ahmad having secretly married the sister of Abbas II Safavi, the Shah of Persia had settled in Mecca, and the result of this union was Nizamuddin Ahmad. Mir Muhammad Saeed, Mir Jumla of Abdullah Qutbshah, on hearing the high attainments and the nobility of birth of Mir Ahmad induced him to come to Hyderabad by sending a large sum of money, and offered him the hand of his own daughter. When Mir Ahmad reached Hyderabad Sultan Abdullah was so much pleased with him that he got his own daughter married to him, whereupon Mir Jumla getting extermely annoyed left Hyderabad in despair and joined Prince Aurangzeb¹. This is another version the reason for Mir Jumla's proving a traitor to Abdullah Qutbshah; the first version has been already described at length in No. 66.

The shrine of Muhammad Nuruddin, alias, Gunday Shah Saheb is situated at the back of Moti Mahal and in the courtyard of the mosque at the head of his grave close to the 'Cheraghdan' (where the lamp is burnt) a charm is engraved on black basalt, which according to the local tradition cures all ailments, provided it is washed with pure water and the same is given to a sick man for drinking¹.

RETROSPECT.

I.

The southern portion of the Indian peninsula lies south of the Narbada, which flows between the Vindhya and Satpura ranges and the plateau of the Deccan lies between the Narbada on the north and the Krishna and Tungbhadra on the south. It is derived from the Sanskrit word Dakshin and is reputed to be a land of evasive mysteries.

The languages of the Deccan are divided into five great divisions:—

The Dravidian (Tamil); the Karnatic (Canarese); the Telingana (Telugu); the Maharashtra (Mahrati) and the Orissa (Uriya). The exact origin of the early inhabitants of the Deccan is quite unknown. So far as the history of this province can be reconstructed, it is evident that the earliest people who visited the N. I. from Northern Russia and the Turanian regions were the Dravidians who spoke Tamil; they were followed by those nations who spoke the Canarese, the Telugu and the Mahrati respectively. These immigrants gradually shifted one after the other from Northern regions and settled into the Deccan.

II.

Little is known in detail of the history of the Deccan before the Brahmanic period. Hindu legends relate that in 500 B. C. three brothers founded three separate kingdoms, all of whom spoke the Tamil language. The Pandya kingdom in the extreme south, the Chola kingdom in the northeast and the Chera kingdom in the north and north-west. Archæological remains and inscriptions bear witness to a series of dynasties of which the most important was the Pandya, who was constantly at war with the Chola.

The conversion of the South to Brahmanism took place about the sixth century B. C. and the earliest historical mention of the Pandya kingdom, whose capital was at Madura, occurs in the Buddhist chronicles of Ceylon. The report of Megasthenes at the end of the 4th and beginning of the 3rd century B. C. mentions the Pandya kingdom as lying at the extreme south of the Indian peninsula. References to the commercial relations existing between the Romans and the Pandya Rajahs are confirmed by the occasional finds of the Roman coins in the Southern portions of India. During 900 A. D. the kingdom of Pandya was at its zenith and its last Rajah reigned in the 11th century.

The next Tamil speaking kingdom of the Deccan was that of the Chola, whose capital was at Conjeevaram (Kanchipuram) and Tanjore. They ruled from 350 B. C. to the end of the 17th century A. D. and ultimately this kingdom was absorbed into the family of Shivaji, the great Maharatta leader of Poona.

The Kingdom of Chera, the third of the Dravidian line, occupied the western coast of Malabar, which ended in the 10 century A. D.

At Kalyani, on the west of Bidar, a Rajput family of Chalukya reigned from 250 A. D. to 1182 A. D. The powerful Chalukyan king Pulakesin II who reigned in the sixth century conquered Chera, Chola and Pandya.

The history of the Deccan during the first Muhammadan era is occupied by struggles between the Rajputs and the Dravidians and by the foundation and disappearance of the Aryan Dravidian kingdoms in the central Deccan, such as the Southern Mahratta kingdom, that of the eastern Chalukya in Kalinga and that of the western Chalukya in the Northern Konkan. On the coast of the Godavery, old Mahrattas reigned at Prathistina (Paitan), and their famous Rajah Shalivahana was the founder of the Saka era, which commences 77 years after the Christian era. Their capital was later on shifted to Deo-Gadh (Daulatabad) and when Sultan Alauddin the Khilji Emperor of Delhi invaded the Deccan in 1294 A.D., Ram Deo, a member of the same family was reigning there, and it is at this period that the continuous history of the Deccan really commences.

The Andhra Raj at Warangal was ruled by Telugu speaking race. The Ganpati Rajahs reigned there in the 13th century A. D. The territories south of the Godavery, the Golconda, the Madrasapatam and other adjoining towns, where Telugu was chiefly spoken, were under the sway of these Rajahs. The Muhammadans first conquered this Raj in 1323 A. D. and ultimately it formed part of the kingdom of Golconda.

III.

After establishing a Muhammadan kingdom in the north of India in 1193 A. D. (589 A. H.) Prince Alaudidn Khilji, a nephew of Jalaluddin Khilji was the first Muslim who in 1294 A. D. (694 A. H.) invaded the Deccan, and after a siege lasting 25 days, Rajah Ram Deo of Deogadh agreed to become a tributary to Delhi. In the following years when the Prince himself succeeded to the throne of Delhi and Ram Deo having failed to pay his dues, he deputed one of his newly converted generals, Malik Kafoor, to Deogadh in 1306 A. D. (706 A. H.) for the collection of the arrears of tribute and ordered the Governor of Malva and Gujerat to render assistance to Malik Kafoor. When the Malik reached Deogadh, Ram Deo apart from offering any resistance as was expected, willingly went to Delhi accompanied by Malik Kafoor to pay his homage to the king. Alauddin was so much gratified at this that he conferred upon Ram Deo the title of Rajah Rai Rayan and besides bestowing other gifts and favours restored Deogadh to him, whereupon Ram Deo remained a staunch and loyal supporter of Ala-In 1309 A. D. (709 A. H.) Malik uddin until his death. Kafoor revisited the Deccan and made Rajah Rudra-Deva a tributary of Delhi; he also conquered Madura and built a mosque at Rameshwaram. The third visit of Kafoor in 1312 A. D. (712 A. H.) was marked by the annexation of the whole of Maharashtra and Carnatic and the conquest of the forts of Gulbarga, Raichur and Mudgal. He also imprisoned Sangal Deo the son of Ram Deo (deceased) who had become insurgent at the time, and declared Deogadh the Capital of the Deccan. After the death of Alauddin, his son, Qutbuddin Mubarak Khilji, invaded the Deccan in 1318 A. D. (718 A. H.) and after subjugating other Rajahs he built a mosque at Deogadh which is still extant.

IV.

After the extinction of the Khilji dynasty, Ghazi Khan, Ghyasuddin Tughlaq, son of Ghyasuddin Balban, succeeded to the throne of Delhi in 1321 A. D. (721 A. H.). He deputed his son Fakhruddin, alias Juna Khan to subdue the Rajah of Warangal, but owing to some disagreement among his nobles this expedition proved abortive. A couple of years later Juna Khan returned to the Deccan in 1323 A. D. (723 A. H.) with a large army; he first conquered Bidar (Vidharba of Bhim Sen, whose daughter Damyanti married Nal, so famous in Sanskrit poetry) which was in the province of Warangal and invading other territories of the Rajah of Warangal, captured and sent the Rajah to Delhi as a state prisoner, but the king of Delhi pardoned Rajah Partab Rudra Deva and confirmed him in his government. Later Juna Khan succeeded to the throne of Delhi and assumed the title of Muhammad Tughlaq. He transferred the Capital of India from Delhi to Deogadh and renamed it Daulatabad.

In 1341 A. D. (742 A. H.) when Muhammad Tughlaq left Daulatabad on an expedition to Madura on his way to that place, he lost and interred one of his teeth at Bir with great pomp and ceremony and erected a magnificent mausoleum over it on a square platform measuring 35 feet each way which still survives. The caprices and oppressions of Muhammad Tughlaq produced the natural harvest of insurrections. As a consequence of his monstrous barbarities and idiotic endeavours the state of the kingdom of Delhi became chaotic and the nobles of Sadah¹ rose at this time to avenge the wanton slaughter of 70 of their brother nobles who were mercilessly massacred at Malwa at the bidding of the king. The nobles of the Deccan taking the lead threw off the allegiance of Tughlaq by declaring their severance with the Court of Delhi and selecting Ismail Mukh2 the brother of Gul Afghan³ and proclaimed him as their king at Daulatabad, by giving him the title of Nasiruddin Shah. Hasan Gangu Bahmani was given the title of Zafar Khan, who having killed Rai Bhairon, a governor of Tughlaq became sole master of the Mirch and Gulburga. In 1347 A. D. (748 A. H.) owing to the incapabilities of Muhummad Tuglag all the Muhammadan possessions in the Deccan alienated from the throne of Delhi and continued to remain so until it was finally annexed by the Moghuls in 1687 A. D.

V.

When it was revealed to Ismail Mukh that the popular opinion was entirely in favour of Hasan, he hastened to summon a conference and abdicated the usurped throne of the Deccan in favour of Hasan Gangu Bahmani, who was crowned in the mosque of Qutbuddin Mubarak at Daulatabad on 24th Rabi II 748 A. H. (1347 A. D.). Coins were struck at Daulatabad and the Khutba was read in the name of Hasan and he was titled Sultan Alauddin Hasan Gangu Bahmani. He changed the Capital of the Deccan from Daulatabad to Gulbarga, considering the latter place to be auspicious and re-named it Hasanabad. Hasan descended from the family of Bahram Gor and Sassan Bahman, son of Isfandyar hence the nom-de-plume of Bahman. But according to another version he is related to have been a slave of Gangu Brahmin, who was a courtier at Delhi.

⁽²⁾ He was a Commander of 2,000 horse.

⁽³⁾ He was ranked among the nobles of higher order.

To begin with Hasan undertook the erection of the magnificient Jamay Musjid (Assembly Mosque) of the fort of Gulburga, which is 216 ft. ×176 ft. with an area of 38,016 sq. feet.

In 1362 A. D. (764 A. H.) during the reign of Muhammad Shah, son of Hasan, the fort of Golconda was presented to the king by the Rajah of Telingana, so that it may be reckoned as a frontier of the kingdoms of Bahmani and Telingana; and in 1424 A. D. (828 A. H.) the Warangal Raj was annexed by Sultan Ahmad Shah Vali Bahmani by the complete annihilation of the dynasty.

VI.

Altogether 18 Bahmani kings ruled at Gulburga and Bidar for about 179 years 1347 (748 A. H.) 1526 (933 A. H.). As a result of the imbecility of Mahmud Shah II, the 14th king of this line, the nobles acquired great ascendancy, with the result that several governors of the Bahmani provinces declared their independence. Sultan Quli, the governor of Telingana, who had remained staunch until 924 A. H. (1518 A. D.) also declared his independence soon after the death of his master in the same year.

Ahmed Nizamul Mulk Bahri was the foremost to establish a separate Nizam Shahi kingdom at Ahmadnagar in 1489 A. D. (895 A. H.). Yousuf Adil Shah and Fat-hullah Imadul Mulk of Elichpur (Berar) followed suite. Owing to the demise of Dilawar Khan Habshi, Malik Qasim Barid came into power and began to rule virtually at the Bahmani capital of Bidar and after his death in 1504 A.D. (910 A. H.) his son Amir Barid wielded much more influence over Mahmud Shah II. In 1520 A. D. (927 A. H.) after the death of Ahmad Shah, son of Mahmud II, his son Alauddin was nominally made a king, who revolted against the aggression of Amir Barid and plotted to kill him, but Amir Barid had him put to death, placing Valiullah, son of Mahmud II on the throne; three years later he was also done to death and Kalimullah son of Ahmad became king in 1526 A. D. (933 A. H.). Realising his sad plight he approached Babar for help but as he himself was not yet secure, he paid no heed to the request of Kalimulla, who had now no alternative but to quit the country. He therefore fled with his life first to Bijapur where the coldness of Yousuf obliged him to retrace his steps to Ahmadnagar where he remained till his death.

Specimens of Bahmani architecture may yet be seen at Gulburga, Bidar and Firozabad, those of the latter place are now much dilapidated.

Among the five independent kingdoms which established in the Deccan after the dismemberment of the Bahmani kingdom, the dominion of Imad Shahi at Berar was the first to succumb to the attack of Murtuza Nizam Shah of Ahmadnagar, who annexed this kingdom into his own in 1575 A. D. (983 A. H.) and in 1600 A. D. (1009 A.H.) the Nizam Shahi kingdom of Ahmadnagar was annexed by the Moghals. Amir Barid II, was driven away by one Mirza Ali who usurped the throne of Bidar in 1609 A.D. (1018 A. H.) but later Mirza Ali was imprisoned by Ibrahim Adil Shah in 1619 A. D. (1029 A. H.) who annexed Bidar into his own territories and ultimately in 1686 and 1687 A. D. (1098 A. H.) both Bijapur and Golconda kings were imprisoned by the Emperor Aurangzeb and their dominions annexed to Delhi, thus ended the drama which had in its wake oceans of incidents and experience, of anxiety and suffering and of pleasure and pain, a drama constantly at play in the realm of the Deccan from 1347 A. D. (748 A. H.) to 1687 A. D. (1098 A. H.).

VII.

Sultan Quli a native of Hamadan, belonged to a noble family of Qara Yousuf; his forefathers being rulers of Turkestan. He was born of Uwais Quli and when still in his teens Sultan Quli came to Bidar from Persia during the reign of Mahmud Shah II, and was made a courtier of the Bahmani King who was so much pleased with his hunting spirit that the village of Korangal was conferred on him as a freehold and the title of Khawas Khan was also given to him. In 1486 A. D. (892 A. H.) when Africans and the Deccanis plotted to kill the King and entered the fort of Bidar. Sultan Quli saved the life of the King by driving the intruders out of the fort, he consequently became a greater favourite of the king and when Qutbul Mulk Deccani, the Governor of Telingana died in 1493 A. D. (899 A. H.), Sultan Quli was given the title of Qutbul Mulk with the Governorship of Telingana. In 1495 A. D. (901 A. H.) Golconda, Warangal and a few pargannahs were also conferred on him by the King as a freehold. He made Golconda his seat (which was then called Mankal or Mangalwaram), and renamed it Muhammadnagar. After repairing the fort and encircling it with walls and bastions he had several palaces built in the fort and the city of Golconda. He subjugated the rebellious Zemindars of Telingana and adopted a policy of expanding his territory by annexation. outset he imprisoned the Zemindar of Rajkonda and invaded the fort of Devarkonda, whereupon Krishna Rai of Vijyanagar, attacked the country of Sultan Quli. conflicting armies met at Pangal (Nalgunda District) and the fort of Pangal fell to Sultan Quli after a siege of 2 months, an inscription of Qutbshahi period may still be seen over the bund of Pangal tank. After this victory Sultan Quli returned to Golconda and Ghanpura and Koelkonda were annexed.

In 1517 A. D. (923 A. H.) Elgundal and Malangur were also taken by Sultan Quli after a fight with Qawamul Mulk of Rajahmandry. In the beginning of 1518 A. D. (924 A.H.) Sultan Quli erected the famous assembly mosque (Masjid Safa) at Golconda and inserted several inscriptions over it, in which the name of the reigning sovereign and a prayer for the perpetuity of his reign is inscribed; which go a long way to prove his fidelity to his master Mahmud Shah II, until his death on 4th Zil-Hij 924 A.H. The inaccurate version of Ferishta that Sultan Quli declared his independence in 918 A. H. has been instrumental in misleading most of the Persian and English historians. After the death of Mahmud Shah II, when Amir Barid had become the sole master of the Bahmani Kingdom, Sultan Quli did not hesitate to declare his own independence, which he did by incorporating his own name in the Khutba and in accordance with the practice of the Kings of Persia he introduced the custom of beating of drums in his capital five times per diem.

During 1519 and 1525 A. D. (926 and 932 A.H.) he was engaged in defeating Shitab Khan, a Zemindar of Warangal, and annexing in his own the forts of Khammammet and Vemalkonda—In 1526 and '27 A.D. he occupied Kondapalli, Rajahmandry and Ellore and the river Godaveri was fixed as his Northern boundary. In 1533 A. D. (940 A.H.) he fought against Ismail Adil Shah at Koelkonda, where one of the soldiers of Ismail, coming out of an ambush inflicted a wound on the face of Sultan Quli, which defaced him for the rest of his life. The sudden illness and death of Ismail on 16th Safar 941 A. H. (1534 A.D.) turned the scales in favour of Sultan Quli, as he got hold of the forts of Koelkonda and Kohir. In 1535 A.D. (944 A. H.) he defeated Rajah Harichand and occupied Nalgundah, afterwards Kondbir also fell to his lot.

Sultan Quli had by this time grown very old and his son Jamshed was yearning for the throne, consequently Sultan Quli was put to death at the instigation of Jamshed by Mir Mahmud Hamadani, on the last Monday of Jamadi I, 950 A.H. (1543 A.D.) while he was engaged in prayers in the assembly mosque of the fort of Golconda.

VIII.

The first endeavour of Jamshed after ascending the throne of his father, had been to blind his younger brother Qutbuddin, who was heir-apparent to the throne. He then diverted his attention towards his sixth brother Ibrahim who lived at Devarkondah, but he soon repaired to Ali Barid at Bidar.

Ali Barid and Ibrahim Adil Shah taking part of Prince Ibrahim Quli attacked Golconda, and in the skirmish which followed one Asad Khan, Commander of Bijapur struck on the face of Jamshed with a sword which permanently disfigured him like his father for the remaining period of his life; in the end Jamshed successfully returned to his capital.

In 1544 A.D. (951 A.H.) he built a fort at Kaolas and occupied Narayan Khed and Ahsanabad, he also took by force the fort of Medak from Ali Barid on which Ali Barid went to Ibrahim Adilshah for help but Ibrahim imprisoned him at Bijapur and ultimately he released Ali Barid on the recommendation of Jamshed, after which Ali Barid and Jamshed remained on very intimate terms. In 1550 A.D. (957 A.H.) Jamshed was laid up with cancer and died in the same year at Golconda.

IX.

After the death of Jamshed his infant son Subhan Quli was placed on the throne and Saif Khan, Ainul-Mulk was sent for from Ahmadnagar for the performance of the duties of the regent during the boy's minority, but Jagdeva Rao, Naikwari, wanted to enthrone Daulat Quli the fifth brother of Jamshed who was a prisoner at the fort of Bhongir owing to his idiocy, and thus to become virtual ruler. Saif Khan soon after establishing himself at Golconda, managed to render Jagdeva Rao submissive, and although Darya Imad Shah of Elichpur had espoused the cause of Jagdeva Rao and Daulat Quli, but Saif Khan succeeded in again keeping Daulat Quli, a prisoner at Bhongir and Jagdeva Rao was imprisoned at Golconda. This incident made Saif Khan a paramount power in the Deccan which displeased other nobles of the court and hence they made secret overtures to Ibrahim Quli, who after abandoning the fort of Devarkonda for fear of Jamshed and remaining for some times at Bidar, was now passing a peaceful life at the court of Ramraj of Vijyanagar. They sent him an invitation to occupy his paternal throne, on which Ibrahim left Ramraj and on entering the frontier of Golconda, the Naikwaris of Koclkonda helped him in forming an army. When the news of the advent of Ibrahim reached Golconda, the Naikwaris of the fort imprisoned Subhan Quli and on 12th Rajab 957 A.H. (27th July 1550 A.D.) Ibrahim entered the fort of Golconda unmolested and was declared a king. Mustafa Khan Ardastani was appointed Peshwa and Mir Jumla and Ibrahim got his own sister married with Mustafa Khan.

In 1554 A.D. (962 A.H.) Ibrahim Qutbshah in cunjunction with Husain Nizamshah laid siege to Gulburga and Ibrahim Adilshah opposed them with the help of Ramraj. But before the commencement of the operations a sensible letter was sent by Ramraj to Ibrahim Qutbshah which had most salutary effect in the conclusion of peace and the result was that these three Kings met at the Sangam, (the meeting place) of the rivers Bhima and Krishna, and each one of them peacefully returned to their respective countries.

X

As Jagdeva Rao had been instrumental in securing the throne of Golconda for Ibrahim, he soon became overbearing for the King and Jagdeva Rao resorted to his old game of putting Daulat Quli on the throne. Ibrahim becoming aware of the plot put all the perpetrators to death, on which Jagdeva Rao fled to Berar, but in 1556 A.D. (964 A.H.) he managed to attack Elgandal only to be repulsed, whereupon he went to Vijyanagar and settled there with Ramraj.

In 1560 A.D. (968 A.H.) Ali Adilshah, Ramraj and Ibrahim Qutbshah laid siege to Ahmadnagar but Ibrahim apprehending that the fall of Ahmadnagar would overbalance the power of Adilshah left Ahmadnagar abruptly and returned to his capital, after which Ali and Ramraj also returned to their respective countries after concluding a peace treaty with Husain Nizamshah on very severe terms. In 1562 A.D. (970 A.H.) Husain Nizamshah married his daughter Bibi Jamal to Ibrahim, after which Husain and Ibrahim attacked the fort of Kalyan, but Ali Adilshah with the assistance of Ramraj not only drove them out so that they had to beat a hasty retreat to Golconda and Ahmadnagar, but in addition Ramraj and Ali so much harassed Ibrahim that he had to deliver Ghanpura, Koelkonda and Pangal to Ramraj and several villages of Ali were also taken by him before he returned to Vijyanagar.

This growing power of Ramraj gave just alarm to all the Muslim Kings of the Deccan and they resolved to suspend their mutual jealousies and form a general confederacy to extinguish it. Ibrahim stengthened the fortifications of Golconda and subordinated the Naikwaris. In the meantime Ali Adilshah invited a conference of his contemporaries and first of all took Ibrahim into his confidence, who hailed the idea and despatched his minister Khane Azam, Mustafa Khan to Ali Adilshah, thence he went to Husain Nizamshah at Ahmadnagar and succeeded not only in making him a party to the alliance but also successfully persuaded him for a mutual union of his daughter, the famous Chand Bibi with Ali Adilshah and that of the daughter of Ali with Husain. In 1563 A.D. (971 A.H.) after the celebration of these marriages Ali Barid also joined hands and when everything was amicably settled, Ali Adilshah by way of pretext despatched his ambassador to Ramraj with a request that Raichur and Mudgal which originally belonged to Bijapur should be restored to him. Whereupon Ramraj expelled not only the messenger of Ali but similar treatment was meted out to the vakils of other Kings which resided at Vijyanagar. Taking this as an ostensible reason for the declaration of war, Husain, Ali Barid and Ibrahim marched to Bijapur with their respective armies and in company with Ali Adilshah crossed the river Krishna and reached Talicota in 1564 A.D. (972 A.H.), only Burhan Nizamshah remained neutral. On the other hand Ramraj accompanied by his brothers Temraj and Venkatadri took the field with 100,000 horse and 900,000 foot—Husain and Ali Adilshah manifested undaunted courage in opposing the enemy. After a great and decisive battle Ramraj was imprisoned and beheaded, the allied Kings laid waste to Vijyanagar and destroyed the city to such an extent that it gradually sunk to insignificance and is a mass of ruins to the present day.

In 1571 A.D. (979 A.H.) Ibrahim occupied Matiapur and Rajahmundry after defeating Shitab Khan and Vidyadaru Rajah of Cassimcotta, and in 1574 A.D. (982 A.H.) the whole territory of Cassimcotta was annexed to Qutbshahi Kingdom. The Rajah of Kondbir who was not punctual in paying his annuity was brought to book in 1579 A.D. (987 A.H.) with the annexation of Venkonda, Khammammett and Kondbir.

After a short indisposition Ibrahim expired on 21st Rabi II, 988 A.H. (1580 A.D.). Besides management of the country he took a keen interest in the population of Golconda. He also repaired and fortified the fort and built a small mosque midway on the steps to Balahisar. The Husain Sagar, Budwell and Kankor tanks, Ibrahim Bagh, Baghe Gulshan and the village of Ibrahimpatan are a few of his productions.

XI.

Ibrahim was succeeded by his 3rd son Muhammad Quli, who founded the city of Bhagnagar in 999 A.H. and erected many buildings besides bazaar, shops, baths, madrasah, and mosques. This city was surrounded by gardens which extended as far as 20 miles in each direction. The Narkhora, Ibrahimpatan, Bhongir and Patancheroo were its four cardinal points.

After conquering the fort of Mussalmurg, Muhammad Quli occupied Nundiyal and Kalabgur in 1594 A.D. (1003 A.H.) Malik Aminul Mulk, his Mir Jumla rendered him distinguished services and subordinated many outlaws.

Shah Abbas son of Shah Tahmasp Safavi's ambassador Aghizlo Sultan first came to the court of Golconda, via Goa with many valuable presents during his reign in 1603 A.D. (1012 A.H.) but he had to prolong his stay in the Dilkusha garden of Bhagnagar owing to constant aggressions of the Moghal army and he was allowed to return to Persia in 1609 A.D. (1018 A.H.). On 17th Zil Qadah 1020 A.H. (1611 A.D.) Muhammad Quli expired and was buried in the Langare Faiz asar.

He was very fond of architecture, the following is a list of the famous buildings which were built by Muhammad Quli during his peaceful reign, when the Qutbshahi kingdom was it its zenith of prosperity.

Daulat Khanac Ali (The Royal Palace which was situated near Kali Kaman). The Char Minar, the Char Kaman, the Char-su-ka Hauz, Darush-Shifa, Jamay Masjid (City) Dad Mahal, (where the present High court is situated) Naddi Mahal, the Banat Ghat and Baghe Dilkusha (were situated 4 miles in the northern direction) Khudadad Mahal was composed of seven storeys, viz., —Ilahi Mahal, Muhammadi Mahal, Hydar Mahal, Hasan Mahal, Husain Mahal, Jafari Mahal, and Musavi Mahal. Baghe Muhammad Shahi, Kohe Toor (was situated in the south) Jinan Mahal, (was situated near Amin Bagh) and Badshahi Ashur Khana.

XII

After the demise of Muhammad Quli his nephew Sultan Muhammad, son of Prince Mirza Muhammad Amin, was placed on the throne by Mir Momin of Astrabad, in accordance with the last injuctions of the deceased King. The new king was also the son-in-law of Muhammad Quli, having married his daughter Hayat Buksh Begum in 1607 A.D. (1016 A.H.)

In 1614 A.D. (1023 A.H.) Husain Beg Qibchachi, the Ambassador of Shah Abbas of Persia came to Hyderabad and returned in 1616 A.D. (1025 A.H.) in company with Shaikh Muhummad Ibne Khatoon. In 1617 A.D. (1027 A.H.) two Ambassadors of the Emperor Jahangir, Mir Makki and Jadoo Rao, visited Hyderabad for the first time. Sultan Muhammad received them with due honour and sent a Peshkash of 15 lakhs to the Emperor. On the occasion of Prince Khurram's (Shah Jahan) visit to Burhanpur and Masulipatam in 1622 A.D. (1030 A.H.) when he was forsaken by many of his nobles, Sultan Muhammad treated him favourably and helped him with money.

About 6 miles east of the city of Hyderabad the foundation of a fort and city of Sultan Nagar was laid by Sultan Muhammad in 1624 A.D. (1034 A.H.) but owing to his premature death on 13th Jamadi I, 1035 A.H. (1625 A.D.) the work was abandoned for good. The chief monuments of the reign of Sultan Muhammad was Mecca Musjid and the first Qutbshahi history, the Tarikhe Sultan Muhammad Qutbshahi was compiled in his regime.

XIII.

Sultan Abdullah, the only son of Sultan Muhammad was crowned in the Muhammadi Mahal on 14th Jamadi I, 1035 A.H. (1625 A.D.) after which the Ambassadors of Ibrahim Adil Shah II, the Burhan Nizam Shah III, and the Prince Shah Jahan came to Hyderabad to offer condolence and congratulation on behalf of their masters. In the following year Ibne Khatoon returned to Hyderabad from Persia accompanied by the Persian Ambassador Qasim Beg, the commander of Mazindaran and his son. After a stay of about 2 years Qasim Beg died here and his son Muhammad Quli Beg returned to Persia with Khairat Khan, the Sarnaubat of Sultan Abdullah Qutbshah. The year 1630 A.D. (1040 A.H.) was marked by a severe famine in the Deccan, which however extended all over India. In 1631 A.D. (1041 A.H.) excessive rainfall flooded the city, inasmuch as the water flowed right over the Old Bridge, which played havoc in the demolition of many lofty buildings of the city. In 1632 A.D. (1042 A.H.) the sister of Sultan Abdullah was married to Muhammad Adil Shah of Bijapur and in 1634 A.D. (1044 A.H.) Khairat Khan returned to Hyderabad from Persia. The year 1655 A.D. (1066 A.H.) was earmarked by the surprise visit of Prince Aurangzeb at the instigation of Mir Jumla, Mir Muhammad Saeed of Ardastan, which was only averted after payment of a heavy indemnity, the lowering of the prestige of Qutbshahi king and the marriage of the king's daughter with Sultan Muhammad, son of Au-Another daughter of Sultan Abdullah was rangzeb. married to Mirza Nizamuddin, alias Mir Ahmad, who was born of the sister of Shah Abbas of Persia. The marriage of the third daughter of Sultan Abdullah was arranged with Sved Sultan but owing to the opposition of Mir Ahmad she was abruptly given in marriage to Abul Hasan Tana Shah. Abdullah died in 1672 A.D. (1083 A.H.) leaving no male issue and as a result of the favourable disposition of his courtiers, Madannah, Akannah, Sved Muzaffar and Musa Khan Mahaldar, towards Abul Hasan he succeeded to the throne and Mir Ahmad was kept under surveillance in which condition he died in 1674 A.D. (1085 A.H). The famous lexicon Burhane-Qate and a compendium of the Qutb Shahi history (Hadiqatus-Salatin) was compiled during the reign of Sultan Abdullah.

XIV.

After ascending the throne Abul Hasan Tanashah appointed Syed Muzaffar his first Prime Minister, but after a short interval he was dismissed and Madannah succeeded him. The Emperor Aurangzeb who had a long cherished desire to annex the existing dependencies of the Deccan, had now resolved to commence operations. He first conquered Bijapur in 1686, and made Sikandar Adilshah a captive and then after a few months' siege he succeeded in overtaking the impregnable fort of Golconda by the treachery of Qutbshahi nobles and in 1687 A.D. (1098 A.H.) the Qutbshahi kingdom came to an end. The annihilation of the Muhammadan kingdoms of the Deccan gave ampler scope to the rising Mahratta power. After the fall of Golconda the Qutbshahi valuables amounted to 8 lakhs and 51 thousand Huns and 2 crores and 53 lakhs of cash. Abul Hasan was made a prisoner and sent to Daultabad fort in confinement where he died fourteen years later in 1699 A.D. (1111 A.H.) and was buried in the mausoleum of Syed Raju Qattal at Khuldabad. The number 14 had a remarkable influence over the life of Abul Hasan. He spent 14 years in boyhood, for 14 years he remained a devout disciple of Sved Shah Raju Husaini II. He ruled for 14 years and remained in confinement for 14 years. Char Mahal and Gosha Mahal were the two buildings which he could add to the long list of edifices built by his forefathers.

Thirty nine years after the extinction of Qutbshahi dynasty the sun of the house of Asaf Jahi dawned over the horizon of the Deccan in 1724 A.D. (1137 A.H.) when Mubariz Khan, Imadul mulk, the Moghal Subadar of Hyderabad was killed in the battle of Shakar Khera in Berar and since this period a large portion of the territories which once formed part of the five independent kingdoms of the Deccan, is by the grace of God under the sway of Asaf Jahi Kings. The present ruler His Exalted Highness, Asaf Jah VII, is by far the most enlightened and sagacious Monarch and his wise and magnanimous administration is making rapid strides in the moral and material advancement of the country.
